Josephus Daniels in Mexico.
A Brave Englishman.
Soon All Will Fly.
A Giant From the Past.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MEXICO WILL find in Josephus Daniels, sent by President Roosevelt, a man indifferent to threats, and eager to promote international friendship. He is an American, and nothing else, the right man to develop among nations on the two American continents the friendship and co-operation that eventually will make them independent of the outside world.

When Mr. Daniels refers to Mexico as "a brother country," he speaks from his heart. All his interests are on OUR side of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

GIVE CREDIT for courage to Allan Monkhouse, British prisoner of the Russian government in Moscow. In danger of death should the Russian court decide against him, he had the courage to step to the microphone, beside the presiding judge, and talking in English, despite the judge's protests, said, among other things:

"It is clear to me that this trial is a frame-up," and went on to say that he had experienced a "third degree" examination, lasting 18 hours.

The protest may cost him his life, Russia being in no mood to endure criticism of her courts, but it will gain for him the respect and gratitude of all Englishmen, and cost Russia many million pounds in English trade.

IT IS HARD to avoid danger of war. Young Englishmen of Cambridge, Oxford and other universities, never in any war, solemnly vote never to fight "for king and country." But they might have to fight.

Hitler's Germany, with short memory, apparently not reaching back as far as 1918, threatens the British government, saying:

"Don't let your House of Commons discuss our business. We don't like it."

He forgets that discussion is the House of Common's business.

RUSSIA, DESTINED to be a great fighting power, in a few years able to strike at any nation on earth through the air, puts on trial perfectly respectable Englishmen. England doesn't like that. A few months ago you would have said:

"If war comes in Europe, it will be Germany and Italy attacking France, with England looking on aloof."

You would not say that now.

SOON, THE airplane will make flying universal. A passenger plane flew into New York the other day, making the trip in four and a half hours.

A Farmington school girl, Miss Maria L. C., flying from Albuquerque N. M. late one afternoon, reached New York the next day, then went on comfortably to Farmington, Conn. Flying seems to our young people as much a matter of course as telephoning.

STRIKING SCENE in the throne room of the Vatican on Saturday before Easter, when a huge Italian, present among other pious holy year pilgrims, knelt before the Pope, who did not know the man, and, seizing the Pontiff's hand in his giant paw, fervently kissed the ring upon it.

In that great hulk, the Pope's quick eye must have seen the descendant of northerners that long ago rode into Italy, conquering, only to be conquered and absorbed. The giant, almost twice as high and three times as heavy as the Pope, was Primo Carnera, the Italian prize fighter.

The burly giant, kneeling before the frail Pontiff, illustrated admirably the power of mind over matter. A very small section of the Pope's highly-developed brain would supply many Carneras with intelligence.

IN JERUSALEM, at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the Greek Church celebrated the annual rite of "Holy Fire." All Christian countries were represented, when a Greek patriarch thrust his hand into a hole in the wall of the sepulchre, and drew out, as if by miracle, a mass of flaming materials.

Sophisticated travelers, who had paid high prices for seats to witness "the miracle," heard cries of amazement rising from the assembled crowd, as men and women rushed forward to light their candles at the holy fire.

IN THE old days, when Jerusalem was ruled by the Turkish Sultan, his soldiers had difficulty in keeping Christians of different kinds from fighting among themselves in the holy places. It was often necessary for Pagan Arabs to beat the Christians into good behavior. Under British rule, things seem to go more smoothly.

THIS IS news, because you never heard of it before. In New York a bass tuba player tried to break his lease because a chirping cricket spoiled his practicing.

His landlord expressed sarcastic fear that some saxophone playing tenant would soon be complaining about a canary. The judge made the tuba player pay $135 back rent, informing him that the cricket is "a romantic and intellectual little fellow," and also "an indefatigable musician."

OBSERVANCE of the second anniversary of the Spanish republic at Madrid was marred by airplane accidents that many of the devout will attribute to Spain's confiscation of church property. With 50 planes circling above the city, one fell in flames on a housetop, killing Sergt. Garriva, the observer, and three women in the house. The pilot escaped in a parachute.

Two other planes fell later, killing three other aviators and a woman passenger.

M'QUAIDE AX FALLS ON POLICE

Clark, Three Captains Due to Go Later In Week

Franklin T. McQuaide, the new police superintendent, started spring house cleaning in the Police Bureau this afternoon.

McQuaide said:

"I want to take a little more time to get a better slant on this picture. I will make some minor changes today, but later in the week I intend to make transfers of a more important nature."

will fire Director Clark. Three police captains, Harry Mellon, Thomas A. Gross and Charles Cahill, are expected to follow their boss, Peter P. Walsh, into retirement.

Walsh's surprising blast that he was fired for political reasons inspired by Senator James J. Coyne brought a warm reply from Mayor Herron, who said:

"The reason for my request that Mr. Walsh resign may be found in the record of the Police Department under his command during the past seven years. The chief feature of that record is shameless toleration of vice and racketeering."

Walsh didn't make McQuaide's entrance any too smooth when he emphasized that McQuaide had signed a cabaret permit for the Monaca Club, now running as a beer garden.

But to this McQuaide retorted that if the Monaca Club had operated illegally under Walsh, he saw no reason why it couldn't operate legitimately under McQuaide.

Harmar D. Denny, Jr., is still regarded as the favorite for Director Clark's job, despite reported opposition of the soldier vote.

Mellon Firm Price Test Looms

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—The Supreme Court today cleared the way for a court test on charges of price-fixing by the Aluminum Company of America, giant enterprise of the Mellon family of Pittsburgh.

It rejected the company's appeal from a lower court order to produce information from its own records.

The appeal was against the Baush Machine Tool Company, of Massachusetts, charging that the Aluminum enterprise fixed and maintained prices at an artificial level. The suit is pending in the Federal District Court for Connecticut, and the Baush concern had asked for the Aluminum records.

Steel Head Sees Better Times

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 17.—(AP.)—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel Corporation, told stockholders at their annual meeting today:

"We are bouyed up with the hope and comfort that better times are ahead."

Taylor emphasized that he was making no prediction as to the time of a turn in the business tide, but declared that "we in the corporation are willing to continue with courage and confidence the fight against the dissolution and despair" which have come in the wake of the depression.

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 17.—(INS.)—The unprecedented action of pledging support to President Roosevelt and the administration's action to hasten recovery was taken today at the annual meeting of the United States Steel Corporation in Hoboken.

The recommendation, made by a stockholder, was lauded by Myron C. Taylor, chairman, who declared:

"We always have supported the presidents of our country, but I gladly put this resolution to a vote because I feel, with you, that we are on the road to better things."

STRAY BULLET HITS CHILD

Betty Lou Boozer, of 1612 Hatteras street, Troy Hill, is nursing a bullet wound in her side and numerous cuts on her arm.

Dr. R. R. Clark treated the child and notified the police.

Hunt for Lancaster Continues in Desert

ALGIERS, Algeria, April 17.—(AP.)—A search continued today for Capt. William Lancaster, British pilot unreported since Wednesday on a speed flight from England to South Africa.

An automobile party returned to Reggan, Morocco, where Capt. Lancaster was last seen, after an unsuccessful search of the desert.

Hit-Run Driver Injures 2 Sisters

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 17.—A hit-run driver who injured two sisters, Lillian and Helen May Harmon, 10, and 8 respectively, near their home, was being sought today by the highway patrol. Both are in the Washington Hospital.

Ligonier Banker Refused New Trial

A new trial for George Clifford Frank, former president of the Ligonier National Bank, was refused today by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar. Frank was convicted last month on nine counts charging embezzlement.

KIN INSANE, SAYS RUTH'S MOTHER

Mrs. M'Kinnell Tells Of Taint to Save Daughter's Life

FLORENCE, Ariz., April 17.—(AP.)—Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, mother of Winnie Ruth Judd, attempting to save her 28-year-old daughter from the gallows, told a lunacy jury today there was a strain of insanity in her daughter's ancestry.

O. V. Willson, chief of Mrs. Judd's counsel, asked:

"Has there been any record of insanity in your family?"

COUSIN INSANE

As the jurors, who are to decide whether Mrs. Judd is to die next Friday for the murder of Agnes Anne Le Roi, fixed their eyes on the gray-haired mother, she answered:

"Yes, I had a first cousin who was insane. He was in an asylum for a number of years—he died in the insane asylum."

Willson asked:

"Any others?"

"Yes, my mother had a cousin who was insane."

'When Ruth was a very young child, did you ever observe anything unusual in her?"

The state objected, contending Mrs. Judd's counsel could not go into the past and arguing the jury must accept as a fact that Mrs. Judd was sane when she was committed to prison 15 months ago.

"BRIGHT" AS CHILD

Superior Court Judge E. L. Green ruled the condemned woman's counsel could delve into the past if it chose to reveal any tendency toward general instability.

Mrs. McKinnell said as a child her daughter had been "bright" and "very imaginative."

Just previously, Superior Judge Green had issued an order authorizing Dr. Joseph Catton, of San Francisco, and Dr. Paul Bowers, Los Angeles, to examine the convicted "trunk murderess" without the presence of her attorneys or relatives.

The two psychiatrists, summoned by the state, had testified they believed Mrs. Judd sane at the trial 15 months ago. Her counsel bitterly opposed the order.

With many witnesses yet to be heard it seemed possible today a verdict of her sanity hearing might not be reached by dawn Friday, the time set for her to hang.

Members of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, which has refused to modify her sentence, indicated they would grant her a short reprieve, should one be necessary to complete the hearing.

Senate Waits Rule On Kingfish Charges

RELEASE SON, FACTOR BEGS

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO, April 17.—John Factor today admitted he had talked to his kidnaped son on the telephone.

CHICAGO, April 17.—(AP.)—John (Jake the Barber) Factor today issued an appeal for the kidnapers of his son Jerome, 19, to communicate with him, declaring he would make any kind of a deal that will bring back my boy. He said:

"I want Jerome back under any circumstances and I'll gladly give all I have. But I can't raise the money they ask in a day or two; it is not humanly possible."

The first letter from the abductors, who spirited the youth away from in front of his home last Wednesday night, demanded $50,000 ransom. Later notes were reported to have raised the amount to $100,000 but officials have not verified this.

Concern for his son's welfare kept Factor, once a barber, later an international speculator, from accompanying his lawyers to Washington where they sought an appeal before the United States Supreme Court from an order extraditing him to England to face charges of mulcting investors of $8,000,000.

Street car and vehicular traffic was re-routed in Anderson street early today as North Side firemen fought a fire at 218 Arbuckle way. The damage was slight.

Trial of Eight In Scottsboro Attack Delayed

DECATUR, Ala., April 17.—(AP.)—Trials of eight Negroes charged with attacking two white women on a freight train near Scottsboro, Ala., were postponed indefinitely today by Judge James E. Horton after he scored a purported criticism of Alabama jurymen in a published statement attributed to Samuel Leibowitz, chief of defense counsel.

This action came after Judge Horton had sentenced Heywood Patterson, first of the Negroes to be retried and convicted, to die in the electric chair June 16.

Judge Horton from the bench read from the Decatur Daily, published here, a statement from Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, Jr., of Alabama, taking issue with a purported statement of Liebowitz as printed in the New York Herald-Tribune.

ATTACK ON JURY

This printed statement quoted Leibowitz as follows:

"If you ever saw those creatures; those bigots, whose mouths are slits in their faces, whose eyes pop out at you like frogs, whose chins drip tobacco juice, bewhiskered and filthy, you would not ask how they could do it."

This statement was purported to have been made in response to a question as to how the jury, try-

SENATE FIRM ON 5-DAY WEEK

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—The Senate today refused to reconsider passage of the five-day week bill and sent it to the House, where important modifications are in prospect to meet administration suggestions.

The vote against reconsideration was 52 to 32. Senator Reed voted for the motion. The Senate passed the bill April 6 by 50 to 23.

The motion to reconsider was made by Senator Trammell (Dem.), Florida, who sought to press an amendment to include foreign articles in the proposed interstate commerce ban against manufactured products made with labor working longer than five days a week and six hours a day. A similar amendment was defeated 41 to 39 before the Senate passed the bill.

The administration has indorsed the principle of the bill, but wants it made more elastic, with the limitation on hours extended wherever it would work undue hardship on an industry.

Canary Choir Brings Throng to Church

BISHOP HILLS, Ill., April 17.—(AP.)—A choir of four canaries warbled in the Methodist Episcopal Church here yesterday.

CHARGES TAX SAVING FOR MELLONS

Governor Says Martin Has Balked Levy on Huge Concerns

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, April 17.—Gov. Pinchot today charged that the Republican organization in the Legislature had delayed the imposition of beer taxes for unemployment relief to "give the brewers a golden harvest" in the first beer days.

He further charged that refusal of State Chairman Edward Martin to agree to increased taxes on foreign corporations was a protection to Mellon companies, including Gulf Refining, the Koppers company and the Pullman company, in all of which, he said, "the Mellons are deeply interested."

Gen. Martin generally is looked upon as a Mellon protege in state politics.

BAD FAITH CHARGED

The Governor charged that an agreement between himself and organization leaders for beer taxes, reached at a conference last Monday, "was broken the very day it was made."

In contrast, the Governor referred to the fact that the federal government has received approximately $500,000 in beer taxes from the eastern district of Pennsylvania, while Pennsylvania has been prevented from collecting any revenue from a state beer tax.

The Governor said:

One Life Enough, Says Darrow, 76

CHICAGO, April 17.—(AP.)—One life of 76 years is enough, in the opinion of Clarence Darrow. He said when questioned about his seventy-sixth birthday anniversary today:

"I would not like to live my life again."

Dempsey Leaves Train Here Carrying Bassinet

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Jack Dempsey stopped off the train in the Pennsylvania Station today carrying a bassinet out of which peeped a beautiful blue-eyed 4½ months old baby boy.

Behind Dempsey came Max Schmeling, another former heavyweight champion of the world, and a retinue of sparring partners, managers, etc., here for an exhibition in Motor Square Garden tonight, when Schmeling will box and Dempsey will referee.

The baby? It was the son of Frank Wallace, the novelist and newspaperman, of New York and Bellaire, O., and it was being taken home to Bellaire by Mrs. Wallace and her mother. They just happened on the train, and Jack insisted upon being his customary useful and courteous self.

A crowd awaited Dempsey and Schmeling at the station and followed them as they wended their way in an open automobile to the William Penn Hotel. There the autograph hounds were on the job. At 12:15, both Dempsey and Schmeling visited the editorial rooms of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph with Schmeling's manager, Joe Jacobs, for a radio broadcast and held a reception downtown, and then visited Mayor Herron's office. At 6:23 tonight, they were scheduled to speak over KDKA and W8XK, its short wave station, to Schmeling's mother in Berlin, as well as to the local listeners.

'September Morn' Now Rich Wife, Mother of 5

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, April 17.—Miss "September Morn" has grown up, settled down and become the mother of five strapping children, International News Service learned today.

The oft-repeated query as to what happened to the lissom lass whose portrait made its appearance in salons, saloons and later in speakeasies during the last quarter of a century, was answered by Paul Chabas, the artist who immortalized her on canvas.

Chabas, interviewed in his Paris atelier, refused to reveal the model's name. No one, he said, ever will know who she was. He referred to her simply as Marthe. He declared:

"Marthe is the wife of a rich industrtialist. She has a house in the country and one in Paris and is the mother of five children.

"Well, it was a long time ago—21 years to be exact—when I painted September Morn. If it were not that the painting indirectly made me famous and brought me a life of comfort, I would say it was the bane of my existence.

"Marthe was only 16, a beautiful child and intelligent. She was very poor, and she had to support her mother. My wife and I were very fond of her. She was almost like our daughter."

Chabas said he wanted the world to believe that Marthe, despite the aspersions cast upon her by various anti-vice societies for permitting herself to be popularized minus clothing, was a good girl. He said:

"Tell people that Marthe was a very good child and is now a very good wife and mother."

HERRIOT ON WAY; SEEKS LUMP SUM DEBT SETTLEMENT

FRENCH LEADER TO NEGOTIATE IN U. S.

Washington Silent on New Development In Tangle

LE HAVRE, France, April 17.—(AP.)—Former Premier Edouard Herriot left for Washington today to lay the groundwork for an eventful French proposal to pay a lump sum for the outstanding war debt owed to the United States.

He is aboard the Ile de France, which sailed today for New York. His instructions are to be an observer, instead of a negotiator, as the French representative in the international conferences with President Roosevelt on world problems.

But he will lose no opportunity to present the French case and pave the way for later negotiations through Andre de la Boulaye, the new French ambassador.

WASHINGTON SILENT

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—Word from Paris that former Premier Edouard Herriot would seek to pave the way for a lump sum settlement of war debts in his Washington conversations with President Roosevelt evoked no comment today at the White House or State Departmnt.

In unofficial circles, it was regarded as a new indication of the pressure to which the President will be subjected to take up the controversial topic of debt revision.

MACDONALD IN PARLEY

ABOARD STEAMSHIP BERENGARIA, April 17.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain, en route to his meeting with President Roosevelt at the end of this week, presided over an informal meeting of the British experts accompanying him in the Prince of Wales suite aboard the Berengaria this morning.

Mr. MacDonald, who appears to be enjoying the trip, spent an hour in the ship's gymnasium before breakfast. Bad weather prevented deck games.

FOUR FACE QUIZ IN VOTE FIGHT

Taking of testimony was resumed today in the contest brought by Mrs. Ann E. Felix, Democratic nominee, in the election of Congressman M. J. Muldowney, in the Thirty-second District.

The hearing was before Attorney William J. Graham, as master.

Four workers for Muldowney, present when contested ballot boxes were brought in for recount, were to be questioned. They are George Bauerhen, George Schmid, Andrew Wagner and John Wood.

Turning in His Credentials -:- -:- By QUIN HALL

KEAN ACCUSED BY PENNINGTON

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—(INS.)—Charges that a New Jersey Senator and two former senators sought his removal were reiterated today by Commander John D. Pennington, in charge of prohibition enforcement for the tristate area, as Federal Judge William Clark, of Newark, N. J., promised a thorough investigation of certain New Jersey breweries.

Federal Judge Clark was insistent in his demands for an explanation of the method by which federal permits were given to breweries owned by Max Hassell, the Reading beer baron, found shot to death with his aide, Max Greenberg, in a hotel room at Elizabeth, N. J.

Commander Pennington named Senator Hamilton F. Kean and former Senators Walter E. Edge and David F. Baird as the men who attempted to have him ousted, assertedly because of his activities against New Jersey breweries.

GORDON LOSES IN BANK CASE

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—(INS.)—Justice Alex B. Simpson, Jr., of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, today reversed a judgment obtained by Dr. William D. Gordon, State Secretary of Banking, in possession of the Dollar Title and Trust Company of Sharon, against the Continental Casualty Company, which bonded employes of the trust company.

Judgment was entered in the lower court because of the insufficiency of the defense offered by the casualty company, but Justice Simpson ordered the case to proceed to trial. The controversy arose over Dr. Gordon's attempts to collect on the bond of an official who embezzled funds of the institution.

AKRON SEARCH MAY END SOON

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—The Navy will abandon its search for the Akron Wednesday unless searching craft are more successful meanwhile in combing the Atlantic off Barnegat Light, New Jersey.

Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, said last night that pieces of the dirigible's outer covering were found yesterday afternoon within a 10-mile area of the spot where the airship plunged into the ocean, carrying 73 men to their deaths.

Pratt said that if no more wreckage is found by Wednesday the search would be called off as hopeless.

The Navy's court of inquiry which has been sitting at Lakehurst, N. J., will be reconvened here tomorrow to finish its investigation.

AKRON, O., April 17.—(AP.)—The "no flight today" sign was hung on the U. S. S. Macon, the Navy's new giant airship, for the fifth consecutive day today.

FAY TO FIGHT GIRL'S CHARGE

NEW YORK, April 17.—(INS.)—The story of Fay Webb Vallee's friendship with Garfield Leon, adagio dancer, will be told in court within a few days, when the alienation suit of Kathleen Smyth, who calls herself Mrs. Leon, comes to trial.

Maxwell C. Cutler, attorney for the chorus girl who declares Rudy's wife stole Leon's love and values the theft at $100,000, announced today that Mrs. Vallee has given notice of appearance. This gives Cutler 20 days in which to file the complaint, but he has it ready to file within the next two days, he said.

Leon, who has retained Nathaniel Cohen as his attorney, declares "Mrs. Leon" never was married to him. Her attorney refused to comment on the repudiation. Both Mrs. Vallee and Leon deny the girl's charges.

Truckers Told to Get P. S. C. Certificates

A drive to force small truckers to obtain certificates of public convenience from the Public Service Commission is under way. It has been announced that they will be given until May 1 to apply for certificates. After that date the commission will move to have their automobile license plates revoked.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—The administration was said authoritatively today to have decided upon Guy T. Helvering, a former representative from Kansas, for commissioner of internal revenue.

ARMS EMBARGO VOTED BY HOUSE

Battle on Resolution Indicated as It Goes to Senate

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—The House today adopted the arms embargo resolution—granting President Roosevelt power to prevent the shipment of arms to warring nations.

The vote was 352 to 110.

Teh resolution now goes to the Senate, where considerable opposition has been indicated.

In the House, Republicans, led by Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, failed in an effort to send the resolution back to the committee with instructions to modify it.

Debate on the resolution, requested by Secretary Hull and sponsored by both the Hoover and Roosevelt administrations, was concluded Friday.

The measure provides:

"That whenever the President finds that in any part of the world conditions exist that the shipment of arms or munitions of war from countries which produce these commodities may promote or encourage the employment of force in the course of a dispute or conflict between nations, and, after securing the co-operation of such governments as the President deems necessary, he makes proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export, or sell for export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President prescribes, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country or countries as he may designate, until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress."

A penalty of a $10,000 fine or two years imprisonment, or both is provided.

ATTACK TRIAL DELAYED

Judge Horton said:

"I do not know whether the leading counsel for the defendant made the statement imputed to him. I am not stating that he did, but so far as it might influence this trial, it could make little difference whether he actually said it or not. The effect will be the same.

"No court regardful of its duty could under such baneful influences permit the trial of this case to proceed at the present time."

APPEAL TAKEN

After Judge Horton had sentenced Patterson to death this morning, Joseph R. Brodsky, of defense counsel, gave notice of an appeal to the Alabama Supreme Court and Judge Horton granted a suspension of sentence pending appeal.

Patterson was the first of nine Negroes to be retried and convicted on charges of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates on a freight train near Scottsboro, Ala., two years ago. Eight were convicted at their first trials at Scottsboro, and sentenced to death. The ninth received a mistrial.

The United States Supreme Court granted new trials, and last month a change of venue from Jackson County to Morgan County was granted.

JAP BOMBERS ENDANGER U. S. MISSION

Methodist Missionaries Caught in Air Raid On Fleeing Chinese

PEIPING, April 17.—(INS.)—Gravely endangering the lives of American missionaries, Japanese airplanes bombed the city of Changli, in China proper, today.

The planes dropped five bombs near an American Methodist mission in the city, while Chinese troops evacuated the district before the Japanese onslaught.

The entire army defending North China was reported retreating to the south bank of the Lwan River, pursued by Japanese planes dropping a hail of leaden death.

REPORTS REACH RAILWAY

Reports of the bombing near the mission in Changli were received by the railway headquarters station master here. Changli is 40 miles southwest of the walled city of Shanhaikwan, which is at the point where the Great Wall meets the sea.

Residents of the city were reported to have pledged allegiance to Manchukuo, Japan's puppet state in Manchuria.

Previously, heavy fighting was reported near Pehtaiho, following capture of Chingwangtao by the Japanese.

MEET LITTLE RESISTANCE

Describing the capture, Lieut. Joseph G. Felber, of the United States Army, described his experiences in watching Japanese planes prepare the path for the capture of the city.

Nine Japanese bombers, he said, dropped bombs for six hours on Chinese troops entrenched in the village a few hundred yards from the Chingwangtao camp of the 15th United States Infantry regiment.

The Chinese, he said, evacuated without fighting.

ACTION BY U. S. ON CUBA URGED

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(INS.)—Cuba's reign of terror today threatened to add further to the cares of President Roosevelt as Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, and Representative Fish (Rep.), of New York, demanded immediate and definite action by this government in the island realm of President Gerado Machado.

Borah, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, advised the prompt exercise of the Platt amendment to bring about "peacable settlement between the warring factions of Cuba."

Fish, Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, counseled intervention, the immediate appointment of a strong American Ambassador to the Caribbean republic, and the selection of a provisional dictator until order is restored.

MITCHELL CASE POSTPONED

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—The case of Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank, indicted on charges of evading the federal income tax laws for the years 1929 and 1930, was put over until next Monday when called for trial today in Federal Court.

United States Attorney George Z. Medalie announced that the case had been put over by agreement.

Two indictments have been returned against Mitchell. When he was arraigned last Friday on the second indictment, alleging the offense for 1930, Medalie said that the indictments would be consolidated and put on the trial calendar for next week.

SECURITY BILLL CHANGES READY

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Revision of the administration bill to regulate sale of securities was virtually completed today by the Senate Banking Committee.

Chairman Fletcher predicted it would be reported out by Wednesday.

Meanwhile tentative modifications in its proposal for a deposit insurance fund were made by the Senate banking subcommittee drafting permanent banking legislation.

The subcommittee expects to complete revising the bill tomorrow, and then will be ready to listen to administration suggestions from Secretary Woodin.

Two Men Injured In Street Brawl

Two men were injured in a free-for-all fight at Burdock and East General Robinson streets, North Side, early today, according to a police report. James Williams, 24, of 601 Sandusky street, and Harry O'Shea, 29, of 107 Burdock street, were injured. O'Shea and Williams and Mike Savage, 28, of 25 East General Robinson street, were arrested on suspicious person charges.

5 BRITONS FACE CONVICTION IN RED SPY CASE

Hint Mercy Sentence, Death Penalty Asked For Only 1 Russian

MOSCOW, April 17.—(AP.)—Prosecutor Andrey Vishinsky today recommended dismissal of the charges against Albert W. Gregory but insisted upon the conviction of five other British engineers of the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company as "spies, saboteurs and bribers."

The prosecutor also asked mercy for two of the 11 Russian defendants—one of the two was Madame Anna Kutuzova—on the ground that they had partially redeemed themselves by betraying the other defendants.

He demanded the "highest penalty" for Vassili Gusev, whom he identified as the "main saboteur," but left to the court's discretion the punishment to be assessed against the other prisoners, including the Britons.

MERCY INDICATED

Vishinsky, in summing up the case for the court, declared:

"The penalty for these offenses is shooting, and the crimes deserve it, but our justice is Soviet justice. We do not cling too formally to the law."

The prosecutor in effect, however, recommended secondary punishment for five of the Englishmen by declaring:

"The organizers of this conspiracy must be punished most severely."

He enumerated these organizers as Gusev, L. A. Sukoruchkin, N. G. Zoric, A. T. Lobanov, M. O. Krasheninnikov and V. A Sokolov.

DENOUNCED AS SPIES

In a five-hour conclusion to his summation, which was begun last night, the prosecutor heatedly berated the five Britons, accusing Thornton and Nordwall of being agents of the British Secret Service.

Vishinsky inspired Cushny to make an angry but shortlived retort to his sharp thrusts. Described by the prosecutor as an experienced spy, who had confessed collecting information but refused to explain his activities, Cushny his face pale with rage, jumped from his seat in the prisoners' dock and flung back at Vishinsky in Russian:

"I did not confess."

FARLEY TO DROP AX 'GENTLY'

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP.)—Republican postmasters whose terms have not expired and who have been giving "loyal and efficient service to the government," need not fear a Democratic housecleaning.

Postmaster General Farley said in a statement last night that the new administration had no intention of abandoning the civil service system of competitive examinations.

Several thousand Republican postmasters are still in office. There are, however, about 2,500 vacancies in the total of 15,032 postmasterships which will be filled within a few days. The term is four years.

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—Mayor Frank Murphy, of Detroit, and a party, arrived here today and immediately set out for a conference with bankers and insurance executives at which they hoped to map out a city refinancing program designed to take care of municipal obligations.

The plan involves approximately $47,000,000 in bonds due 1933-34 and about $3,500,000 due in the balance of the fiscal year.

Mexican Paper Lauds Daniels' Attitude

MEXICO CITY, April 17.—(AP.)—Praise for Josephus Daniels' attitude toward his new task as Ambassador to Mexico came today from El Nacional, government newspaper.

The paper said his declarations on arrival here forecast a continuation of the policy of "equal sovereignty, mutual respect, reciprocity and respect of territorial rights."

President and First Lady Greet Egg Rollers

WASHINGTON, April 17. —(AP.)—President Roosevelt paid a surprise visit today to the hundreds of children who attended the White House Easter egg-rolling.

They had been somewhat disappointed because the grass was so wet they couldn't roll their eggs, but when the President unexpectedly appeared on the south portico, with the whole Roosevelt family party, including the two dogs, Major and Meggie, the child faces lighted with happiness.

The President said:

"I am glad to see you all, and I wish I could come out there with you."

The President gave them a bright smile and gay hand wave.

"Hello and happy Easter!"

Said "Sistie" Dall, the President's 6-year-old granddaughter:

"Hello and happy Easter!"

Said 2!-year-old "Buzzie" in direct imitation of his larger sister.

Whereupon, the President went back into the executive mansion and Mrs. Roosevelt, her daughter, Anna Dall, "Sistie" and the two dogs, walked down the steps and out into the garden among the jubilating children.

"Buzzie," wheeled out by his nurse, resembled a small plump Easter egg, in a blouse of bright blue and small trousers of green.

His nurse held him up and he waved to the crowd, keeping time to the music of theb and. Small children waved back to him. Even after the nurse sat "Buzzie" down in a big wicker chair, he kept on waving, marking time to the music with the soles of his shoes.

"Sistie," long light hair streaming over her shoulders, was dressed in a pink frock. Her mother wore dark blue, and Mrs. Roosevelt was costumed in dark blue and white.

Mrs. Roosevelt paused once in her rounds of the Easter egg crowd to comfort a little girls who was weeping because she couldn't see Sistie.

FATHER'S HOME BOMBED, SON ARRESTED

Invalid Parent Moved Before Blast, Fire In Brookline

Following an explosion and fire that damaged the home of his invalid father, Gantona Vanire, 25, of 730 Dunsten street, Brookline, was held for the bomb and arson squad by Magistrate J. J. Sweeney in Mt. Washington Police Court today.

Lieut. James McDonough testified excelsior saturated with gasoline was found scattered about the house and a fuse was laid through a window of the dwelling.

The building was vacant at the time of the explosion last night. The father, Mike Vanire, was removed to the home of a daughter yesterday morning. Police said it was the first time the invalid had been moved in months. The damage was estimated by police at $4,000.

Gantona Vanire is employed as a laborer in the city highways and sewers department.

Stanley Zielenski, 29, of 556 Dunster street, was fined $5 or 10 days in jail by Magistrate Sweeney on a charge of interfering with firemen.

Two Held After Explosion, Fire In West Homestead

John Furiano and John Fusco were held today on suspicious person charges by West Homestead authorities, following a fire and explosion at 217-219 West Eighth avenue last night.

Both men were occupants of the double brick building which was damaged. Neither they nor their families were home at the time.

After investigation, County Detective Peter Connors reported that floors of the building had been soaked with oil.

Bridget Coyle, of 205 Seventh avenue, Homestead, was taken to the Homestead Hospital with undetermined injuries suffered when she tripped over a fire hose.

Police Capt. John J. Jenkins, of Homestead, collapsed while watching the blaze and was taken to Homestead Hospital. Sergt. William O'Brien, of West Homestead, was treated at the hospital for a lacerated hand, suffered when he was stuck by a falling brick.

The fire spread to the dwelling occupied by Mrs. Josephine Lentz and the family of Joseph Anderson.

Traffic in West Eighth avenue, a main thoroughfare, was tied up more than two hours as Homestead and West Homestead firemen battled the blaze.

ATHLETE SHOT IN 'TRIANGLE'

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 17.—(AP.)—The condition of Henry Downs, 25-year-old Denver basketball player, shot and critically wounded by E. P. Merrick, former state highway enforcement officer, was described by his physician today as "fairly satisfactory."

Meanwhile Merrick, brother of Tom Merrick, teammate of Downs, was held in jail pending the outcome of Downs' wounds. Merrick contended he "shot in defense of my home."

County Attorney Lewis R. Morris said a charge of assault with intent to kill might be filed.

Downs insisted the shooting was accidental, but Merrick told officers the basketball player had attempted to attack his wife while a guest in their home Friday night. The shooting occurred Saturday afternoon.

Weather Conditions.

The rainstorm, Saturday over the lower Mississippi Valley, advanced northeastward slowly, and is now central over the Ohio Valley, Columbus and Fort Wayne, 29.74, having been attended by light to moderate rainfall over most of the states east of the Mississippi since Saturday, and rain continues over the Ohio Valley today. Another disturbance appears over the Southwest, Modena, Utah, 29.40, with rain on its northern side, in Montana and Wyoming. Weather is fair over the southern states, the plains and the southern Rock Mountains and the plateau this morning. It is slightly warmer in the southern plains and the central Rocky Mountains; elsewhere changes in temperature were slight.

PINCHOT LOSES 'BIGGEST' FISH

HARRISBURG, April 17.—(AP.)—And the biggest one—"it was tha-a-t long"—got away.

This is Gov. Gifford Pinchot's fish story.

Back at the capital today after opening the trout season at his Milford estate, the executive reported that his "fisherman's luck" held up pretty well.

In two hours Saturday, he caught 11 trout and put five back in the stream because he "wanted only six" and it's his custom to keep only as many as he wants.

The Governor used a dry fly and a barbless hook and he said he thinks he did a good job, considering the fact that the water was high.

But the "biggest one" really did get away.

'DESERT SHEIK' FREES TWO U. S. GIRLS

'Swell Guy' Holds 2 For Ransom After Ride to Pyramids

NEW YORK, April 17.—A little Arabian music, professor, while we hear the tale of the tall, handsome sheik who was a swell guy.

Far away in Egypt, where the Nile pursues the even tenor of its ways (a little softer, professor) there appeared one day last month two young graduates of Sweetbriar College, Va., to be known hereafter as the Misses Mary Chenault Van Winkle and Frances Luckett, residents of Louisville, Ky.

Simultaneously, there moved into the scenery a gent who was, to quote Miss Van Winkle, "tall, very handsome; a Bedouin, I think."

The young women told of it today after their arrival aboard the White Star liner Georgic. They said:

"He was a swell guy."

Be that as it may, the Bedouin was slick as they come. He smiled as they admired the pyramids. Would they like to see some rare treasures dating back to Ptolemy's great grandmother? He would only be too happy to show them. Would they step into his automobile? Yes, he used an automobile. How quickly these foreigners pace themselves to the times!

"We thought he doubtless was a maharajah," the young ladies agreed, no doubt thinking they may have got into India by mistake, "and that he lived in a grand palace." And they added:

"So we went along. And he lived in an old tent, a dirty old tent with little tents around it. And camels."

(Play faster, professor. Villainy is afoot.)

The sheik informed the young women they were his prisoners; that he was holding them for ransom; that they would be held in the dirtiest of the little tents until their parents sent over some Arabian money or its American equivalent. He was a swell guy.

Meanwhile (adagio, professor, adagio) in America and unbeknownst to the sheik, the President of the United States declared a bank holiday. Money flowed like glue in Greenland.

Word on this sad state of affairs filtered through to the tent of Abou Ben Sheik. He muttered, speaking entirely in Arabian:

"A fine kettle of fish, this."

And he told the young women:

"Your beautiful America, she has shut down the banks. I bow to the inevitable. Here is a small purse of gold. Hop into my car and I will return you to Cairo."

And that is the story of the Misses Van Winkle and Luckett of their visit to the pyramids; and of the handsome sheik who was a swell guy.

UNCANNY VISION IN DEEP NIGHT DESCRIBED

Spook, Likened to Old Member, Returns to Pew He Used

Neither ghost nor janitor made an appearance at 3 p. m. Easter Sunday morning at the First United Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue, Oakland. For some time reports have been current that the spirit of old white-bearded Ed B. Mahood, who for many years was a faithful member of the congregation, was appearing very early Sunday mornings to the janitor of the church, Edward G. Martin, of 7140 Mt. Vernon street, Homewood.

An interested investigator braved the dashing rain to see the spook. But though he waited long, all he got for his pains was a soaking. The janitor, who usually begins work at midnight to prepare the church for services, failed to show up. And so did the ghost.

SPOOK DESCRIBED

The ghost, Janitor Martin says, is a tall, kindly old gentleman with dark eyes, snowy white hair and beard, and wears a black coat, white shirt, black tie and wing collar. Several members of the church say that this description, except for the height, fits Mahood, who died several years ago. The ghost, it is said, always appears standing in the aisle near the pew in which Mahood sat for so many years.

According to Martin, he may see something and then again he may not—it all happens in the blink of an eye. But so far as he knows he never saw Mr. Mahood alive in his life. He doesn't attempt to explain the vision. Neither is he afraid.

No material explanation of the phenomena has been advanced. The walls of the church in the corner where Martin says he has seen the figure are all one color, plain and bare. No lights cross to form confusing shadows. To Martin, the phantom looks like a live man would look in the semi-darkness, solid and substantial, except that he appears and disappears in a flash.

UPHELD BY PASTOR

In commenting upon the ghostly appearance, the Rev. William J. Reid, pastor of the church, said:

"Mr. Martin is not an imaginative man trying to make up a story. He must surely see something. It may be that he is physic—and that he sees what no one else would be able to see. The figure he describes is very like Mr. Mahood except for the height. It would be interesting to see if Mr. Martin could identify his picture."

Mr. Mahood was for many years one of the most generous givers to the First United Presbyterian Church. But he liked to be alone. When the first house he built in a lonely neighborhood was surrounded by other homes, he sold out and built the home his nephew now occupies on the Middletown road. Although very faithful in his attendance, and well liked by all, he would never accept any church office.

PRESS LESLIE WILL SEARCH

A new search for a will by the late Max G. Leslie, former political leader, has been begun. A preliminary examination of his papers failed to produce a will.

Attorney Artemas C. Leslie, a son, said he was confident his father had made a will and that it would be found.

Postal Thugs Escape In Hail of Bullets

CHICAGO, April 17.—(AP.)—Four men robbed the Schiller Park postoffice of $75 today, escaping in their car as a neighbor sent five rifle shots after them. The postal station is located on the outskirts of the city.

ACTRESS' MAID SUES SUITOR

NEW YORK, April 17.—(INS.)—Ann Snowden, Negro maid who got in the way while her mistress, Kathryn Ray, "Vanities" girl, and two admirers were fighting it out in her hotel room, brought suit today for $200,000 against Martin Dealzaga Unzue, Argentine millionaire.

Unzue, according to Joseph J. Jacobs, Ann's lawyer, was doing most of the fighting, and all of it that came Ann's way. The maid now claims to be threatened with cancer as a result of the blows she received.

The Argentine, who is known as "Macoco" in Paris, where the free-for-all took place, came to Miss Ray's room in the spring of 1929 and demanded to be admitted. He suspected a man was there, and, said Jacobs, he was right. An Englishman, as yet unnamed, was there, and Unzue went for him.

2 Brookline Shops Entered by Thieves

Thieves entered the Ritz Beauty Shop, 742 Brookline boulevard, and Betty's Dress Shop, 738 Brookline boulevard, over the week-end, police reported today. They took a woman's suit and wrist watch from the former place and did $100 damage to equipment apparently in search of money. Little of value was taken from the other shop.

DAVIS IN WEST FOR HEALTH

Senator James J. Davis, seeking to regain his health sufficiently to stand another operation, is on his way to Crescent Springs, Ark. Accompanying him is Dr. John W. Shirer, who will superintend the convalescence.

Davis passed through Pittsburgh early yesterday from Washington. One of the physicians who recently operated on him for appendicitis, Dr. F. C. Blessing, last night set his present weight at 185—"a very big loss"—and said his trouble was in the gall bladder and upper abdomen.

NEVIN'S COUSIN, COMPOSER, DIES

EASTON, Pa., April 17.—(AP.)—George Balch Nevin, 74, composer of sacred music, whose cantatas and other compositions were sung in hundreds of churches throughout the land on Easter, died today.

"The Adoration" and "The Crucified," the words of both by Mrs. Lillian C. Nevin, his wife, and "The Crown of Life" were among his best known compositions.

He was a first cousin of Ethelbert Nevin, composer of "The Rosary" and other noted works.

Nevin was born at Shippensburg, Pa., and for 35 years conducted a wholesale paper business in Easton, retiring in 1919.

He is survived by his widow and two children, Gordon Balch Nevin, organist and composer of Westminster College, and Miss Shirley Dean Nevin, of Easton.

Missing Italian's Airplane Located

CALCUTTA, India, April 17.—(AP.)—Wreckage of an airplane which, it is believed, belonged to the missing Italian airman, L. Robiano, was found today near Chittagong.

Robiano, who was attempting to set a new speed record for the England-Australia flight, left here Friday for Victoria, Burma. Since then severe thunderstorms swept the wild Burman region.

Stage Dancer Loses Leg Aiding Autoist

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 17.—(AP.)—Manville Whitaker, 22-year-old dancer, known on the stage as Grant Murray, lost his right leg as a result of an attempt to aid a motorist whose car was disabled yesterday.

He was crushed between bumpers of two stationary machines when one of them was struck by a third car as he was adjusting a tow-chain from his car to that of a motorist in a ditch.

Policeman Loses Clock in Pursuit

Residents of the Shadyside district are scouring the neighborhood in search of a time clock, lost last week by their special patrolman, Samuel Gardner. Pursuing a thug who snatched a purse from Miss Virginia Bialas, society dancer, near her garage at 4749 Wallingford street, Gardner lost his clock.

Girl Playmate Slain With Loaded Pistol

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—They were children at play—Catherine Aralone, 13, and Alfred Vignola, Jr., 11—but their plaything was a loaded pistol.

Catherine was killed. When relatives ran to the room last night, drawn by the sound of the shot, the boy was standing over her, weeping, the gun in his hand.

Fugitive Falls to Death In Leap to Elude Police

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—"Big Eddie" Horstman's last words were:

"So long, Kid."

When the knock came at his hotel room door yesterday morning he was chatting with Peggy Lee, a dancer. He knew that knock was the "law." The detectives wanted him to answer that charge down in Charleston, S. C., where an indictment named him as a member of a rum-running syndicate.

By the time the knock was repeated he had tossed two loaded pistols out of the window to the roof of a building 12 feet below.

He knotted sheets together hastily. He tied one end to the radiator. Twelve feet to the roof, and he could recover his weapons and flee. A six-story drop yawned between the two buildings, but he could swing over.

He crawled over the ledge of the window. He grinned. To Peggy Lee he said:

"So long, Kid."

He slid out of sight. The officers were pounding at the door. The rope of sheets tightened under "Big Eddie's" great weight. It snapped.

They saw a young woman standing before a mirror expertly putting the finishing touches to her Easter toilette.

They ran to the window and looked down.

Shaw Uses Words Of Honey as He Talks to Wife

ROSLYN, N. Y., April 17.—(AP.)—George Bernard Shaw may sling wicked barbs at the world in general, but he has a honeyed tongue when speaking to his wife.

Arthur Williams, long a close friend and associate of the late Thomas A. Edison, returned to his Long Island home today after a four months' cruise on the Empress of Britain, with a story of overhearing the caustic wit utter a pretty gallantry to Mrs. Shaw.

Soon after the Shaws joined the cruise, Williams said, Shaw was heard to say to his wife:

"My dear, I have looked them all over, young and old, and there is no one on the ship who compares with you."

Hunt for 'Marie Louise' As Queen of Spies

BERLIN, April 17.—(Universal.)—A relentless, thrilling search for "Marie Louise," mystery woman in the London trial of Lieut. Norman Baillie-Stewart, is now on in Berlin.

The chase began with the arrival here of a British officer who, it is reliably reported, has been commissioned by army authorities to locate and reveal the identity of the woman from whom Baillie-Stewart received letters containing money.

At the lieutenant's court-martial, the prosecution maintained the money was in payment for military secrets he sold. Baillie-Stewart said it was in furtherance of a love affair he had with Marie Louise.

The search for Marie Louise is reported progressing on the theory that she is the cleverest and most dangerous of Germany's secret agents and that the lieutenant turned over to her information of inestimable value regarding motorization of the British air fleet's ground detachments.

Since Baillie-Stewart's conviction to five years' imprisonment and dishonorable discharge from the British army, foreign military circles in Berlin have been of the opinion that Marie Louise is in reality the "Mademoiselle Docteur," who was the terror of the French army during the World War.

G.O.P., BREWERS IN DEAL, SAYS PINCHOT

yond the last of May. The organization leaders agreed to raise $25,000,000. Only $7,000,000 has been raised. What stands in the way?

"The organization leaders, including Gen. Martin and Senator McClure, voted unanimously at a meeting in my office not only to tax beer at once, but to introduce and pass immediately a joint resolution authorizing the preparation of the stamps and other machinery necessary for taxing beer. The receipts were to go to unemployment relief. Their promise to pass such a resolution was broken the very day it was made, and the resolution agreed upon was never even introduced.

HARVEST FOR BREWERS

"Delay in enacting and earmarking taxes and license fees for relief gives the brewers a golden harvest. Pennsylvania needs money. Give it to the brewers, instead, says the organization.

"Another thing which is delaying action on unemployment relief is Gen. Martin's opposition to removing the tax advantage of foreign corporations against Pennsylvania corporations.

"Among the foreign corporations Gen. Martin is protecting are the Gulf Refining Company, the Koppers company, and the Pullman company, in all of which the Mellons are deeply interested. Other foreign companies are the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, the American Stores Company, and the Rmerican Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"If this injustice is removed, Pennsylvania can provide $3,000,000 more for the unemployed and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will match it. But Gen. Martin stands squarely in the way."

The relief muddle arises over methods to be employed for financing the $7,000,000 relief bill already passed for use until June 1 and the $18,000,000 bill, now in the House, for unemployment relief in the succeeding biennium.

RELIEF MUDDLED

How far Gen. Martin believes relief agreement is away, is evident from the fact that he has just sent to publishers a questionnaire on the situation, asking what unemployment conditions are in their districts, and whether they believe the state needs to proffer assistance in such sums as are suggested by legislative acts.

It will be several days before the replies will be received, and the State Chairman would hardly agree to have the bill pushed through without waiting for the responses. Courtesy demands this, as Martin realizes, and there will also be the chance to blame outside sources for whatever may happen to the relief program.

COURT RULES IN MURDER

Vincenzo Moschiello, 47, of Wilmerding, was held guilty of second degree murder by Visiting Judge Norman T. Boose, today. The decision was in the shooting, August 24, 1930, of George M. Thompson, 48, a machinist, of 614 Brown street, Wilmerding.

Moschiello pleaded guilty to murder and testimony was taken to determine the degree.

Moschiello, who lost his wife and two children by death within a year, fired when Thompson teased him, according to testimony.

T. R.'s Grandson Free in Speeding

WESTPORT, Conn., April 17.—(INS.)—Speeding charges against Theodore Roosevelt III, grandson of the President Theodore Roosevelt, were nolle prossed in town court here today by Judge Earl Jagoe.

Roosevelt was arrested on the Boston Post Road April 1 on his way from Harvard to his home on Long Island. Police had claimed his automobile was going 60 miles an hour.

Boy Seriously Hurt In Fall from Trolley

Francis Burke, 16, of McNeely road, was injured last night when he was brushed off the rear of a Brookline street car as it rounded a curve in the Pittsburgh Railway Company yard near McNeilly road, it was reported last night. Police said he was stealing a ride on the car. He was taken to South Side Hospital, where he was reported in a critical condition.

Last Moro Chieftain Dies of Old Wound

JOLO, P. I., April 17.—(AP.)—The last member of the Moro band which precipitated fighting that cost morethan 60 lives in a remote section of Jolo Island was reported dead today.

Police Train Recruits For Black Horse Troop

Quartet of Trotters Added to City's Mounted Force

Pittsburgh police are busy initiating the four latest recruits to the Black Horse Troop.

Under the direction of David G. McDonald, superintendent of the bureau of horses, the new mounts are being trained. This includes teaching them to obey commands, to handle crowds and to thread their way through traffic.

The new horses are former trotters, as are most of the police horses. One a 4-year-old mare, May King, raced the mile at Schenley Oval last summer in 2:19. She will begin regular duties in Schenley Park today.

Another two, brother trotters Keno and the Hottentot, had El Canto for their sire and Blanche Carter for their dam—both of whom had great trotting records. Keno was purchased from Sheriff Ross W. Stout's farm in Clarksburg.

The newest colt, Billy Miller, was purchased from the Bancroft Farm in Avella. He has not yet been saddled by Pittsburgh police, but he had a fine record as a trotter at many fairs throughout the state last summer. His sire was the famous Guy Mac and his dam the equally famous Sibyl Worthy. He has trotted a mile in 2.13.

EXCHANGE CASH FROZEN IN BANK

DETROIT, April 17.—(INS.)—The First National Bank of Detroit continued to act as a collector for Canadian banks after it had been closed by the banking holiday, and thereby tied up several million dollars which it handled only as a transfer agent, Conservator C. O. Thomas admitted today.

The money belonged to persons who attempted to transfer funds from Michigan to foreign banks. Thomas said:

"It will be paid back eventually, but I don't know when."

Hill Man Arrested In 'Numbers' Raid

Jacob Kansom, 29, of 503 Herron avenue, was arrested today on a charge of conducting a lottery, following a raid by County Detectives on the Spokane restaurant, 1232 Wylie avenue.

Detectives said they confiscated "number" slips in the restaurant. Kansom was released on $2,500 bail.

$1,000 in Jewelry Stolen from Home

Jewelry valued at $1,000 was stolen from the home of H. W. Rafferty, of 131 Yorkshire road, some time during Sunday, according to a report to city detectives. The loot included a bar pin containing 30 diamonds, valued at $400.

Girl Here Awarded Art Contest Prize

Miss Elizabeth Shannon Phillips, 22, of 373 South Pacific avenue, has been awarded one of the 10 prizes by the Art Students' League of New York in its national competition for young artists. She will receive free tuition next year.

STATE BUDGET CUTS RESTORED

HARRISBURG, April 17.—The general appropriation bill in which the House cut $13,000,000 from Gov. Pinchot's budget is to be tinkered with in the Senate.

Already $7,000,000 of the cut has been restored, and it is possible the bill as it finally comes from the Senate Appropriations Committee will shave no more than $3,000,000 from the Governor's budget.

Others issues of major importance, including banking legislation, are hanging fire in the House or Senate. If they are not passed, the Governor will call a special session almost immediately, and members interested in some of the measure would not be resentful.

This is perturbing the Republican regulars, and impelling them to continue the session of the Legislature for at least another week. House leaders have said they would seek adjournment this week.

JOBLESS STORM RELIEF LEADER

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., April 17.—The home of Dr. William S. Cook was guarded today by armed police, following a demonstration of unemployed early Sunday in which city police used tear gas bombs to disperse the crowd of 1,000 persons. Stephen Lois, 19, burned about the legs and feet, was treated at the hospital.

Dr. Cook, chairman of the work committee of the City Welfare Board, was charged with reducing food orders because unemployed refused to work in Ambridge and Aliquippa.

Mayor C. W. Calvin addressed the crowd in an effort to disperse them.

The question of "no work, no eat" will be submitted at a meeting of the State-County Relief Board tonight in New Brighton.

Dry Agent Slain In Raid on Farm

JONESBORO, Ark., April 17.—(INS.)—Shot three times in a raid on a farm home near here, Leroy Woods, 33, a federal prohibition agent, was dead today.

Woods and a fellow officer, R. Keck, were attacked when they arrested three members of a family for violation of the prohibition laws. Keck was beaten severely, but is expected to recover.

With Powder...

Do As Your Dentist Does . . . Use POWDER

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dull Teeth Become White

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used.

It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

No Grit—No Pumice

Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

Dr. LYON'S TOOTH POWDER

Henry Ford Approves President's Day

DETROIT, April 17.—(INS.)—Henry Ford, who was one of President Roosevelt's most active opponents during the campaign, today had given his hearty approval to the designation of April 30 as President's Day in honor of the chief executive.

Ford, in a lengthy formal statement, referred to President Roosevelt as a man who "has shown that he possesses sincerity and courage, and is unsparing in the expenditure of his vast energy in the work of his office."

The motor magnate called upon the nation to "unite to give him an atmosphere of moral support."

Gov. William A. Comstock and several other state executives have already designated the day by proclamation.

M. E.'S FIGHT SUNDAY BILL

The Methodist Episcopal Ministerial Association today petitioned Gov. Pinchot to veto bills to legalize Sunday sports and race tracks and providing for election of delegates-at-large to consider repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. A resolution adopted at a meeting in the Methodist Building said:

"We respectfully urge you to veto all legislation adversely affecting the moral welfare and interests of the commonwealth, such as the legalizing of Sunday sports, race tracks and gambling and professional prize fighting, the repeal convention by delegates-at-large, and the liquor control bill that does not safeguard minors, women and children from exposure to alcoholic liquors known to be intoxicating.

HARRISBURG, April 17.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot announced today he would hear both opponents and supporters of the Schwartz Sunday sports bill at one hearing tomorrow afternoon. The measure, passed by the Legislature, would legalize Sunday baseball and football in communities where the voters approve.

County Delegation To Urge Age Pension

A delegation of Allegheny County residents, representing labor, fraternal and women's organizations, will urge passage of the mothers' assistance and old age pension bills in the Legislature at a hearing in Harrisburg tomorrow.

The Senate will hold the hearing at 2:30 o'clock on the Sowers bills, sponsored by the Vare organization of Philadelphia. The measures already have been passed by the House.

PINCHOT TO AIR UTILITY STAND

HARRISBURG, April 17.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot will deliver a long-awaited message to the Legislature tonight—his demand for a tightening of the public utilities laws.

At the same time, the Governor's "mystery bill" on utilities regulation will be laid before the General Assembly. Pinchot declined to comment upon the bill today, nor would he say who will sponsor it.

The McClure bill, to revise the public service company law, is waiting to be reported for final passage in the House. It would give the Public Service Commission control over holding companies.

COUGHLIN SEES REVOLUTION

DETROIT, April 17.—(Universal)—In his farewell radio address of the season from the Shrine of the Little Flower, Father Coughlin yesterday spoke on "The Resurrection." He again stressed the danger of revolution in this country "unless a change comes and comes quickly," declaring:

"We must be ever mindful of the causes leading to the French revolution and the irrational birth of Communism."

He warned against any narrow spirit of nationalism and called for prayers for the President.

"Pray for the President, and ask God to guide him in returning America to the American."

Troops in Readiness Charge of Socialist

READING, April 17.—(AP.)—Arthur C. McDowell, of Pittsburgh, told the national executive committee of the Young People's Socialist Leagues of America meeting here that U. S. troops are being massed for use in case relief systems collapse and riots occur. McDowell, industrial director of the league, spoke yesterday.

At a two-day meeting of the executive committee of Unemployed Councils of Pennsylvania, plans for an unemployed march on foot to Harrisburg were announced. John Parks of Wilkes-Barre, state organizer, said delegations will not use automobiles and will meet in Harrisburg July 4.

GARBO GARBED AS MAN SHUNS PANAMA

By J. A. RYAN
Universal Service.

ABOARD STEAMER ANNIE JOHNSON, PANAMA CANAL, April 17.—Attired in white flannel trousers and a short jacket, Greta Garbo stood on this steamer's bridge with Capt. C. O. Holberg throughout the 10-hour journey through the Panama Canal yesterday.

Continuing to cloak her identity in secrecy, the Swedish motion picture star, en route to Hollywood after a vacation in her native country, refused all requests for interviews, and was silent as to her plans in Hollywood.

Gatun Locks were crowded with admirers as the ship approached, but Miss Garbo crouched behind the ship's bridge and refused to appear. She explained:

"My trip was for a rest and not for publicity purposes."

After receiving much fan mail at Cristobal, a Spaniard presented the movie star with an enormous straw hat of brilliant colors. She gave it to Capt. Holmberg, however, with the comment that the hat was not becoming.

Capt. Holmberg said his noted passenger was listed as J. Emerson and that her passport was in order. He added:

"Miss Garbo has been an early riser every morning on the voyage and has retired early. She has an excellent appetite and her health is much improved.

"She has been taking daily sun baths and has acquired a coat of tan.

"With two other passengers, Miss Garbo played shuffleboard and deck tennis, taking three glasses of champagne at frequent intervals.

"She is wearning mannish clothing and has no traveling companion."

Explaining Miss Garbo's aversion of interviewers, Capt. Holmberg added:

"It is not that she does not like people, but she is shy."

STEEL WORKS ACTIVITY GAINS

Operations at the Edgar Thomson Works of the Carnegie Steel Company will be increased this week as the manufacture of rails for the Erie Railroad is begun. Work will be provided for men who have been idle.

About 12,000 tons of steel will be rolled, requiring a week or 10 days for completion. The remainder of an order for 16,049 tons was held for delivery later.

The order was the first large rail order placed this year. The number of men who will be given employment was not determined.

The steel industry saw favorable signs of improvement during the past week. Operations that have been down to as low as 12 per cent of capacity picked up to about 20 per cent.

WORLD ECONOMIC DRIVE PROLONGS DEPRESSION IN U. S.

Debtors, Competitors Use Exchange Rates to Crush American Trade

By GARET GARRETT

Excerpts from an Article in the Saturday Evening Post of April 15, 1933. Reprinted by Permission of the Editor.

(Copyright, 1933, Curtis Publishing Co.)

For more than a year this country has been the object of a world-wide economic drive, producing or tending to produce the following effects, namely:

To intensify and prolong the American phase of universal depression;

To increase unemployment here and to arrest it in foreign countries;

To defeat the American government in its undertaking, by use of public credit, to stop the disastrous liquidation of prices, commodities and capital values;

To annul our tariff laws and at the same time to override the laws whereby we meant further to protect American labor by limiting immigration from countries having a low standard of living;

To stimulate unnaturally the sale of foreign merchandise in the American market and at the same time to hinder the sale of American merchandise in foreign markets.

To unbalance the economic position of this country by bringing the weight of more than half the world's selling to bear upon it, while at the same time diverting from it the support of more than half the world's buying.

To create in this country hoards of gold, impounded to the credit of foreign countries, the first effect of which was the same as if Americans themselves were hoarding the gold, as they have been exhorted not to do, and the second effect of which might be much worse because the foreign owners, having hoarded it here and earmarked it, could take it out of the country whenever it pleased them to do so;

And, lastly, to propagate in this country a motive for war-debt cancellation as the price of economic peace.

Debtors Aggressors

The aggressors have been our principal debtors and principal competitors. They formed a ring about us. On our left, Japan, playing the game of depreciated currency so hard as to create dismay in the minds of all the others. On our right and across the whole top of us, Sterlingaria.

What is Sterlingaria? It was, to begin with, a British idea. It has become a momentous British fact. The idea was to associate in one separate economic world all countries whose money was linked to the pound sterling. A sterling world of depreciated currencies against a gold-money world, for purposes of offense and defense, America representing the gold-money world.

They called it first the sterling area and then the sterling empire. The word area was indefinite and the word empire was impolitic. So they coined a new word—Sterlingaria. (See "Planned Money," a book just published by Sir Basil Blackett, a director of the Bank of England, chapter X, "A British Monetary Program," page 151.) . . .

Laterly, for a year at least, we have been facing not simply the problems of a world-wide depression, not simply the disastrous international competition that might be expected naturally to arise from the necessities of a world-wide depression, but a purposeful economic drive. We have been slow to perceive the facts; perceiving them, we have been loath to believe their meaning.

Exchange Weapon

The principal weapon has been the wonderfully subtle and incredibly powerful mechanism of exchange. By means of this one master mechanism, such other weapons have been manipulated and controlled as, for example, depreciated currencies, tariffs, prices, dumping, even the abasement of human labor for purposes of destructive competition. . .

In the hands of Sterlingaria, in the hands of our principal debtors and competitors, whether they belong to Sterlingaria or not, and in the hands of Japan, this last and hitherto unexplored power of the exchange mechanism has been employed systematically for purposes of economic aggression against this country. There has been no concealment of it. The evidence is everywhere. . .

That is the news as it appears in the financial press and in the financial columns of the daily newspapers everywhere. But what does it mean?

British Buy Dollars

It means that the British treasury, with a fund of more than three quarters of a billion dollars at its free disposal, has been manipulating international exchange. It means that the British treasury has been acting not only upon the value of the British pound sterling, and indirectly, therefore, upon the value of all the different kinds of money current in Sterlingaria that are linked to the pound sterling; it has been acting at the same time upon the value of the American dollar.

It means that the British treasury, through its agents in the money markets of the world, has been selling the British pound sterling to cheapen it and at the same time buying American dollars to make them dear. It was not the Bank of England that did this; it was the British government that did it.

To perceive the extraordinary nature of what the British government has been doing, you have only to imagine what would happen diplomatically or otherwise and what would be said in the emotional language about Americans if the United States Treasury, with a fund of more than three-quarters of a billion dollars appropriated to its hand by Congress, should undertake deliberately to manipulate the value of the British pound sterling either up or down for the benefit of American trade at the expense of British trade.

Blow at U. S. Trade

But why should the British government sell its own money and buy ours?

First, to penalize the purchase of American goods; for who can afford to change pounds sterling into dollars at a discount of one-third to pay for American goods?

Second, to subsidize the sale of British goods in the American market, by giving the British exporter an artificial profit of approximately 50 per cent in the exchange, which enables him to land his goods over the American tariff wall at prices which are less than the cost of manufacturing similar goods in this country. Thus our tariff laws are annulled.

Third, to create large gold balances in this country. These balances represent credits for British goods sold in the American market.

Fourthly, to keep British labor employed at the expense of unemployed labor in this country.

And the British government has just been saying it achieves these objects, especially the one last named. . .

Many Nations Join

But the effects of British policy have not been confined to the trade between Great Britain and the United States alone. You have now to think of Sterlingaria.

All the countries of the British empire followed Great Britain off the gold standard, naturally; then Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden, which is all of Scandinavia; then 12 of the Latin-American countries, except the four that were already off; then Japan in her own way; then Greece and Portugal; until, in all, 33 countries had officially forsaken the gold standard of exchange, and 11 more, pretending not to have forsaken it, had nevertheless suspended gold payments.

The direct British trade is the smallest part . . .

With the certainty of wind currents seeking the profitable vacuum, currents of merchandise gather and set hitherward from all parts of the earth . . . The grimness with which Japan plays the game of depreciated currency makes her a special menace to American industry . . . The explanation is that Japan is more ruthless with her labor . . . There is a boom in Japan, but here, in proportion as Japanese goods displace American labor, there is an increase of unemployment, almost we had better admit the Japanese themselves, for as resident immigrants they would have some value as consumers . . .

Imports Increase

Imports from Sterlingaria, from Japan and from Germany increasing, with American production of the same commodities falling, with the American depression deepening, with unemployment widening!

This country was unprepared. It had no law to be invoked and it has hesitated to make one. The flexible provisions of the tariff act do not contemplate emergencies, and before anything can be done under the anti-dumping act, it has to be proved that the imported merchandise is sold in the United States at less than its fair market price in the country of origin, which leaves out entirely the factor of depreciated and manipulated exchange. . . .

In the final sense, all the depreciated currency countries pressing their goods for sale on the American market have had one motivation. That was to trade us out of our gold. . . . But the British, who bore with a long auger, have never one simple motive. . . .

As we suffered the economic advantage to turn against this country, and as our own depression for that reason deepened, a very unpleasant change appeared in the British attitude toward war debts. Where formerly the propaganda had been for cancellation on the ground of sentiment and generosity, or because the war had been a common cause, suddenly we began to be instructed and warned of depression until we are willing to wipe out the debts. . . .

The debts, if disposed of to the satisfaction of our debtors, will then become a fixed charge upon the cost of American production, and to that extent handicap Great Britain's principal competitor in the trade of the world.

Pittsburgher Hurt In Fatal Auto Wreck

COLUMBUS, O., April 17.—George R. Simmen, 35, of Pittsburgh, was injured seriously here Saturday night in an automobile wreck in which Mrs. Edith Watson Bartlett, 29, a stenographer, was killed. Mrs. Barlett's husband was also injured.

Plow Horses Fall Into Well; Rescued

CRESSON, Pa., April 17.—In an unusual accident on the farm of Peter Null, of Munster, two horses dragging a plow fell 35 feet into an abandoned well. Planking gave way under their weight. The horses were lodged in the well until an auto towing truck hoisted them out.

Girl Dancer Killed As Engine Hits Auto

NASSAU, N. Y., April 17.—(AP.)—Virginia Roberts, 17, vaudeville dancer, was fatally injured and her sister, Dorothy 19, the other half of the stage team, seriously injured when their automobile was struck by a locomotive yesterday.

'Inferiority Complex' Often Inflated Superiority

Are you a "Sensitive Soul?"

Do you go around with a heart that is pierced and bleeding from human cruelty?

Yep; I know that sounds like "ten-twent-thirt" mellerdramer. But, according to Dierdre, such is the Tragic Condition of her life.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

Out of your broad experience, will you try to help me? I am so unhappy! For years I have suffered agonies. My problem is a nature cursed with extreme sensitiveness, and the most devastating feeling of inferiority.

MANY BLESSINGS

Strangely enough, I have many blessings which should make me happy. I am attractive, a university graduate, and have been married four and a half years to a university athlete. I love him more every day. He is a fine husband and a splendid father. We have a little son, 3½, and a girl, 1½. We have a large home. My husband's business is good, even now. We have lots of friends, and a pleasant social life. I should be happy, but I am not.

The happiness I should have is being destroyed by these unfortunate traits I have. I feel that my lack of control over my mental life is robbing me and mine of something very precious, and if it is within human power, it is my intense desire and hope that I can conquer them.

All my life I have suffered agonies from this "mental illness" of mine. Until I was out of college I did nothing to conquer it, because I didn't know how. Since then I have struggled, oh, so desperately, to win relief. I have read books on psychology. I have reminded myself of my social equality with others. I have tried to concentrate on the feelings of others. I have filled my life with the duties of a devoted wife and adoring mother. I have tried to be a true friend—thinking thus to find self-forgetfulness.

WANTS TO RUN AWAY

But I find that in spite of all this, in spite of realizing that many of my "hurts" are the result of petty and superficial happenings, I am still so utterly miserable that I wish I could run away and hide, where I could escape from these tearing, scorching "hurts." I do want to "fight the good fight"—to be a good mother and wife. I want friends. I try in every way to make myself desirable as a friend, to those whose friendship I prize. But still I am like this.

One day, a long time ago, a girl—a rather peculiar girl—told me that life would always be a struggle for me. Is that true? Must I always struggle with myself? Is there no relief for me?

Now, each time I come into contact with any group of people socially, I steel myself beforehand, so I may meet the "hurts" that seem to come without fail, with lifted head and proud eyes. I want to be kind and gracious, yet many times I find myself almost haughty, almost rude, as an armor against the oncoming "hurts," which might find their mark too soon and leave a bleeding wound behind.

Will you help me to clear away this fog? What can I do? How can I help myself? What thoughts of magic will open the gates of my mind and give me peace? The happiness of loved ones rests on me. I mustn't fail them. What is wrong with me?

DIERDRE.

TOO SERIOUS

What's wrong?

You're wrong, Dierdre. You—with your magnified estimate of your own importance. You're taking everything too seriously, and too personally.

Why all this frenzy of fear about what people are "thinking of you," when the simple fact probably is that they're not thinking of you at all? "Inferiority Complex" you call it; yet it bears all the earmarks of an extremely inflated superiority complex—and is just as great a nuisance to those who must associate with you.

Other people aren't deliberately trying to hurt you. They're merely being themselves. Their lives will inevitably collide with your life sometimes. But what of it? You collide with them, too. These collisions aren't Major Tragedies. They're just traffic accidents.

Stop taking them personally, and begin to view them as incidents along the road of living—part of the tremendous pageant and adventure of living not your life, but all lives.

No; that won't be easy. But in it, you'll find freedom!

Women in Man's Life Share Spotlight in Tragedy—Fay King

WHEREVER MAN TRIUMPHS OR FAILS, IN THE BACKGROUND ARE COURAGEOUS WOMEN WHO WATCH AND WAIT, AND WHO WILL REJOICE OR WEEP!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

In the background of every man's life are the women who wait and watch. We do not think of these brave mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts until they share in some signal success, or are suddenly bereaved by some tragedy.

Yet they are always there, encouraging, consoling and believing in man's small adventures as well as man's greater ones.

They have stood on the shores waiting for the return of small boats that never returned.

They have watched for their men who marched away to needless wars.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Carolyn Rescued When Shack Is Attacked

As that high-pitched scream from the shack tore through the silence there was a fraction of a second in which I think we in the circular woodland glade stopped breathing. Then Ronald's fingers gripped my arm so tightly that I came near echoing the shriek we had heard.

"Did you hear that?" he demanded hoarsely. "Did you hear Marion calling me just as I heard her there back in the hotel? Will you let me go now? You must!"

"When you can control yourself, you may go," I said, purposely making my voice icy. "If I let you leave here in your present state, you would be no good to Marion or anybody else."

He quieted in an instant, but his high-flung head, his quick breathing and the tenseness of his posture reminded me of a spirited horse waiting the signal to be off.

"You must rid yourself of one idea," I told him. "There were no words in that scream, and there is no certainty that it was Marion's voice. It was the cry of a young woman, I think, but it was so quickly suppressed that even that deduction was doubtful, and it certainly was impossible to recognize the identity of the voice. It could be either Marion or your sister."

The sound of axes and sledges upon wood and glass resounded suddenly in the woods, and Ronald's voice was suddenly savage.

MEN ENTER HOUSE

"Let me go!" he snarled, twisting himself loose. It's either my sister or Marion who screamed just then, and I'm standing here."

"Steady, lad," my father said. "You're needed there, and you shall go, but I must tell you where. Brown, used to these woods and to judging noises in them, tells me that scream was outside the house. He will show you a way by which you can cut around to the back and not be seen. Don't you waste any time trying to get into the house. There are plenty of men there. Now be off. Stay with him, Brown."

The two figures were gone upon the word, and my father turned to the rest of us.

"Richard, to your post," he said, "and the rest stand close to the trees. We do not know what second—"

The crashing noises suddenly had ceased, and we realized that there had been no sounds of combat; but from the inside of the house came Harry Underwood's voice, which I think can be heard for a mile when he exerts all its strength.

"Marion! Carolyn!" he called. "It's all right. Let us in."

We did not hear the response. Nothing but a bull-of-Bashan voice or a scream would have carried to us. But the next moment Harry's voice rose again.

MARION GONE

"God almighty, Carolyn! Where? When? Who?"

There was another instant's silence, while Mary's fingers and mine, interlaced, almost crushed each other. Then Mr. Underwood's voice again:

"Come on, men, with me!"

We could imagine the rush of feet that followed, although we could not hear them. Then there was silence for a little, followed by a sound that sent my hand to my throat in mingled pity and terror.

It was the sound of broken-hearted sobbing that came to us, faintly at first, then steadily growing louder as it neared us. Then we heard Hugh Grantland's voice, grave and tender.

"Richard!" My father's voice sent the call across the glade. "come back here quickly."

The chief was in action again, and I knew that his keen intelligence was sending out queries in all directions, weighing, rejecting, changing his campaign in an instant to meet this astonishing new condition.

For when the next minute Carolyn, half led and half carried by Hugh, stumbled into the clearing and my outstretched arms clasped her and held her tightly, she cried hysterically:

"Oh, what have they done with Marion? They took her away out of the room just before we heard the airplane go over, and about 10 minutes afterward I heard her scream. Oh, why didn't I rush out with her, even if they killed me for it?"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Hospitality

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man and I are vocal students in the same studio. It so happens that we have both learned the same opera and we would like to sing our parts together for our own pleasure. The point in question is—the young man, who lives with his family, has asked me to come up to his home to sing, as one of his friends will play for us. A says it would not be proper for me to do this. B says it is. Who is correct? K.

If you are sure that this plan will be agreeable to everyone concerned (especially if it is convenient to the young man's family), I see no reason why you shouldn't do this. And even if you sometimes go to the young man's home to sing, wouldn't it be pleasant, too, for you to return this hospitality and courtesy by inviting him and the accompanist to come to your home some times?

A Breakfast

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

2—Should the hat be left on during the meal?

M.

1—Wear the same kind of costume that you would wear if you were lunching in this hotel. A daytime suit, or any other kind of ensemble, appropriate for the street.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Tactics of Play

The Opening lead, no matter how carefully thought out or how well designed, is frequently the clue by which the Declarer is enabled to determine the correct play of the hand. On the other hand, sometimes the choice of the lead is such that the Declarer is left in a position of making a complete guess as to which suit to develop, and has, of course, in such a situation, and even chance of guessing wrongly Team-of-four play, where the contestants are fairly evenly-balanced and the eventual contracts are the same, is one of the tests by which players may determine the efficacy of leads from the standpoint of defense.

North, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ K9853 ♡ A95 ◇ A5 ♣ K75 | |
| ♠ Q10 ♡ 862 ◇ K1092 ♣ 10432 | North / West / East / South | ♠ A642 ♡ 104 ◇ 84 ♣ AQJ96 |
| | ♠ J7 ♡ KQJ73 ◇ QJ763 ♣ 8 | |

In both rooms the eventual contract was four hearts, and when the Dummy went down, the contract appeared fairly safe, provided the Declarer got any breaks whatever in the play of the hand.

In one room the diamond 2 was opened, and South, feeling quite sure that the lead was not a short lead, decided to take the finesse. The Knave in the closed hand won the trick, but the lead and the play now revealed to South that he must give up what would ordinarily be the best plan of playing the hand and seek an alternative course that otherwise would have appeared less desirable. Obviously, West was marked with four diamonds to the King. Therefore, East could hold but two, so an attempt to establish the diamond suit with one ruff must fail. There remained then the possibility of establishing the spades with the loss of 2 tricks, which, if successful, would limit the Declarer to the loss of 3 tricks all told. This required a considerable element of luck, including a 3-2 break in trumps. However, it appeared the best plan and was successfully carried out, South losing only one club and two spade tricks.

In the other room, at the same contract, the Opening lead was a club, and South, without the guidance of the Opening lead, decided to play for the establishment of the diamond suit. He was even willing to have East overruff one lead of diamonds, provided he could find the spade Ace in the West hand. This line of play failed, simply because East held the spade Ace. However, with South's lack of illuminating information, such as was furnished by the diamond lead, his play was eminently correct. Where South had the information that West held a four-card diamond suit, the chance of making the contract depended upon being able to develop the spade suit to discard his losing diamonds.

Both Declarers, in the light of the information they had, played the hand to the best advantage. The fact that one made game while the other was defeated 1 trick was a by-product of an Opening lead, and this Opening lead itself cannot be strongly condemned.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South opens with a call of one club, and North responds with a call of one diamond. What should South now call with the following hand, no intervening bid?

♠ A10 ♡ 10652 ◇ A83 ♣ AQ16

Answer—One notrump. If North is unable to rebid, it is more than likely that a game cannot be made.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

New browns, burgundy tones and zinnia shades call for special attention to make-up. The most fashionable dress colors of the season are mahogany tints, pinkish-browns together with all their interesting relatives. If the cheek rouge and the lip smear are of the geranium or Chinese red order, there's a color war on. So the would-be beauty must not only think of eyes and complexion in connection with commercial blushes, but must consider the frock, the hat and the coat. So goes the beauty pageant.

One application of cold cream or tissue oil won't achieve a thorough cleansing of the complexion. Two are required with careful removal, digging the cloth or cleansing tissue well into the surface of the skin, changing all the time to clean spots. It is best to remove make-up with cream before using soap and water. If soap makes the face feel drawn, more cream should be used after the rinsing and the gentle drying.

Elbows looking gray? Rub up soap suds in the palms of the hands, add a tablespoon of corn meal, use the mixture to scrub the arm hinges. Flesh is coarse and heavy there, on it the starch from the meal has a refining, soothing influence. Follow with a creamy application.

Household Hints

To use up thin blankets, after they have been washed, stitch the edges together, then cover with a pretty cretonne or casement cloth, stitch across in quilting fashion, and you have an excellent coverlet for the foot of the bed, where extra warmth is desired. This will take the place of an eiderdown.

When cooking a steak and kidney pudding, try putting it in a saucepan of cold water instead of the usual boiling water, and bring to the boil gradually. This makes the meat more tender and juicy.

When frying potato chips remember to dredge a little flour very lightly over the chips, as this enables them to brown better and they have a much nicer appearance.

NEW PROGRAMS :-: 'Evening in Paris' 'Vengeance Is Mine' :-: ON AIR

Farley Talks On Postal 'New Deal'

Today brings the inaugural presentations of seven new program series to Pittsburgh's dialing public.

The sponsors of "Mysteries in Paris" resume the melodic "Evening in Paris" half-hours, featuring Frank Parker, tenor; Mary McCoy, soprano, and a comparative newcomer, Woods Miller, baritone, with Nat Shilkret's orchestra, on WJAS at 9:30. Agnes Moorehead continues to supply the comedy as "Nana."

The WCAE Players, under the direction of Ed Harvey, open a new serial thriller, "Vengeance is Mine," at 8 p. m. The story is based on the crime-crusading activities of a detective-philanthropist. It is presented in 13 episodes.

Ranny Weeks, young Boston baritone, is starred with a band in a new series having its premiere on WCAE at 8:45.

Mary Eastman, Barbara Maurel, Theo Karle and Evan Evans, supported by a symphony orchestra and mixed chorus, comprise the talent lineup for a weekly WJAS operatic presentation inaugurated with "La Traviata" at 9 o'clock. Howard Barlow directs.

Classical interpretations are offered by "The Spinners"—Christine Adams Jones, 'cellist; Ellen Herring, violinist; Adelaide Merrill Biddle, pianist, and Cora Williams Hines, contralto—in a new KDKA series, beginning today at 5.

The remaining two premieres are WWSW daytime features to be heard daily: "Blessed-Event Parade," including talks on child care, at 10:45 a. m., and a broadcast of movie gossip by Walter Framer at 12:45 p. m.

Farley Speaks

James A. Farley, United States Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, discusses "Postal Reorganization Under the New Deal" on WCAE at 10:30 tonight, as the third speaker in the National Radio Forum's "Cabinet Series." Farley has proposed a new postal economy program which, it is estimated will save the government at least $100,000,000 annually.

Something unique in the line of radio programs is the CBS-WJAS demonstration of the new MacNeil "Fog Eye," which detects unseen icebergs, enemy ships, or planes and concealed batteries of guns, at 11 p. m.

Will Rogers Cobb's Rival On Radio

By AIRCASTER

After an absence of two years, except for occasional guest appearances, Will Rogers is slated for a weekly NBC-WJZ commercial series beginning April 30. The Gulf Refining Company, which also plans to put Irvin S. Cobb on the air over a rival network, will sponsor.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's only radio address of his pending United States visit is listed for NBC-WCAE April 26.

Claude Morris has decided that he likes Pittsburgh better than N'Yawk—and so returns to the KDKA continuity staff today.

Other KDKA changes are the appointment of Francis H. Conrad, formerly of the NBC commercial traffic department, as assistant to Oliver Morton, station manager, and of John C. McCloy as director of the Artists' Booking Service. Conrad is the son of Dr. Frank C. Conrad, of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, who is noted for his pioneer radio experiments.

Music Travelogue

Guy Lombardo's music will do a bit of traveling when his weekly chain broadcast goes on the air from the Anatole Club's Easter Ball at the Grotto Wednesday night.

It will be sent by wire through WJAS to New York and then rebroadcast from the metropolis over the CBS network back to Pittsburgh.

The Grotto dancers are slated for a "scoop" by some few—well, instants, for instance.

The Burns and Allen part of the program, which originates in California, also goes to New York before being put on the air. The program will be announced from the New York studios.

Poor Butterfly

Not only will Myrtle Vail be out of "Myrt and Marge" for some time to come, it seems, but she must also cease even the effort of collaborating with Director Bobby Brown in writing the "Where Is Myrt?" scripts.

Her physician has spoken—even to the extent of threatening to remove her bedside radio receiver—and Myrt, still quite helpless from the automobile accident, is forced to admit that, for the moment, the medical gentlemen hold all of the cards. . .

Myrt's progress toward recovery, despite the to-do, is termed "satisfactory."

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

While visiting with Globe Trotter Mayor Herron on Saturday he showed me around the spacious chambers allotted to the chief executive. No words can describe what a first-hand glance reveals of their grandeur.

The Mayor hasn't lost any of his democracy by moving. He proudly shows all the fine appointments and then, with a twinkle in his eye, he solemnly announces that you are standing on the "magic carpet." He pointed to a corner where sits a beautiful radio and remarked:

"That's where we get the Globe Trotter."

Answering those questions referring to the broadcast of baseball games, it was decided at the meeting of the National and American club owners to discourage it as much as possible. Some of the clubs that permitted it last year might continue but no additional clubs will. That means that as far as Pittsburgh is concerned there will be no broadcasting of the games.

When our Pirates win the pennant—Ah—that'll be a different story.

In arranging for the Globe Trotter appearances of Max Schmeling and Jack Dempsey today, there was a question whether or not any agreement with some one or other would prevent their broadcast. This was cleared up when Jules Beck, the local matchmaker, called New York and talked to Billy McCarney, the booking agent.

His answer indicated that it was all right except that Max, fearless in the ring, doesn't like those microphones, being much more eloquent with his fists.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

Just a little thing like April showers couldn't spoil the Easter parade yesterday. Since Pittsburgh's smart set really parades Easter Day by going to church, I mean that the rain didn't interfere with folks going to celebrate Easter.

Many of our social register set were there, looking smarter than ever in new spring clothes and festive with corsages of orchids and gardenias.

Even though there weren't so many corsages as in former years, everyone looked as though she were thoroughly enjoying the advent of spring.

Family Parties

This custom of going to church Easter morning with the entire family is ever so nice. Little girls and boys with shining faces, their parents and grandparents all were there.

One charming family was that of the popular T. J. Hilliards. Mrs. Hilliard wore a smartly tailored spring coat of gray wool with a cape and a gray fabric hat with a blue band . . . and no fur trimming. Of course she had a corsage.

Nancy Brown and Mary Eliza Brown arrived with Elinor Reed at Calvary Episcopal, and Virginia Drake came with her mother, Mrs. J. Frank Drake.

Mrs. A. Rex Flinn was there with her daughter, Mary Louise and her niece, Nancy Patterson, and the John McKelveys with Mrs. McKelvy's mother, Mrs. Douglas Stewart.

One of the most striking costumes was that of Mrs. T. Howe Nimick. She wore a smart navy blue cape suit having an interesting belt of white leather with a cut-out design. Her hat of straw was navy blue, of course, and she wore a corsage.

Leather Accent

The Harvey Childses, the III, and the Blair Childses met at Calvary, and went to church together. Mrs. Harvey Childs wore an interesting redingote costume with a red and white printed frock and black crepe coat. Mrs. Blair Childs wore an unusual suit of chartreuse green flannel, very tailored, with a fez hat to match.

Neil Stewart Zang, who arrived with her fiance, George Stephenson—they'll be married a week from Saturday—wore a beige tailored coat with a hat to match and a lovely corsage.

At Shadyside Presbyterian, where I arrived just at the close of services, there was another shower. And much scurrying to the protection of cars.

Showers At Parade

W. L. Mellon was there, chatting with gracious Mrs. James I. Kay. And Mr. Mellon's niece, charming Patsy Mellon, was at the same church, looking smart in a tailored gray cape suit with a fetching little blouse of blue and white checked silk. And she had a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Gordon Fisher chose a navy blue and white redingote ensemble, and Mrs. F. G. Blackburn was in navy blue. With her were her two little daughters, Madeline and Betty, looking ever so charming in little rose wool coats with natural straw hats and corsages, too.

There just isn't space to tell you about everyone I saw. So I'm going to make just a few general observations. Pittsburgh's smart set favors tailored swagger suits, cape suits and coats, particularly the furless kind. And fabric hats rival straw ones. And for color accent, gay blouses or printed dresses. And even less in the way of decorations than in former seasons. They are choosing interesting material, well cut.

Honoring Ruth Christine Kohne, who'll marry Charles Gilman Cole, Saturday, Mrs. J. W. Henry will give a wedding breakfast in her home, Bigelow boulevard, the morning of the wedding, of course.

A debutante of several seasons ago is engaged—Elinor Hilliard Tucker. Her parents, the Richard B. Tuckers, of Morewood avenue, formerly of Norfolk, Va., announce her betrothal to Cornelius Decatur Scully, Jr., son of the Cornelius D. Scullys, of Howe street.

Theater League Opens Art Exhibit

Lovers of the theater will find much to stir their memory as well as their interest in the theater arts exhibit which the Pittsburgh Drama League is staging in Kaufmann's auditorium this week. Many will choose the displays in the stage model contest as the most interesting feature. Others will linger long and lovingly over the Richard Mansfield exhibit, which his widow has loaned and which includes old photographs of herself and her famous actor-husband, handbills and some memory-rich old scrap books. And there is an etching and a water color done by Mr. Mansfield.

Some little thirteenth century figures that were replaced by the billboards and lithographs of later days are hanging along the wall. There's a colorful display of stage costumes, including armor, and an arresting exhibit of theater advertising, relics of the old "melodrammers." Irene Kaufmann Settlement contributes a corner of varied attractions, including a picture "painted" entirely with stage make-up materials. Books on the theater and a showcase of make-up are other features.

Programs each afternoon will be a feature. Today George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph, is speaking concerning his friendship with Richard Mansfield.

Mt. Lebanon Group Names Dance Aides

The Bryson Club of St. Bernard's Church, Mt. Lebanon, is holding a dance Thursday evening in the Dormont New Century Club. Aides for the affair include Miss Marion Casey, Miss Mary Powelson, Miss Mary Armsey, Miss Isabel Gilson and Miss Pearl Dietz.

The bi-weekly bridge meetings will be resumed on Tuesday, April 25, in the meeting rooms of the club.

Avalon Woman's Sister Wed To Floridan

The marriage of Miss Erma Jane Pollock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Pollock, of Sandy Lake, Pa., to Elmer Sewell Simmons, of Orlando, Fla., was solemnized Wednesday evening in the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. K. W. White, of Hemlock street, Avalon.

Officiating was the Rev. Dr. O. H. Milligan, pastor of the Avalon United Presbyterian Church. Only the immediate families and close friends were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons will leave soon for the South, where they will make their home.

Women Will Elect Nominating Committee

The Brookside Woman's Club will elect its nominating committee at the meeting tomorrow in the home of Mrs. Stewart C. McFarland. The remainder of the afternoon will be given to Mrs. Ola Hansen, who will talk on Burma.

New Castle Girl And Eastern Man Marry

Mr. and Mrs. John Kieffer Furst of Winter avenue, New Castle, Pa., have made known the marriage of their daughter, Miss Julia Furst, to Charles McDowell Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Norman Morris, of Germantown, Philadelphia, which was solemnized at an informal ceremony on Thursday at 3 o'clock in the Furst home.

Officiating was the Rev. Dr. W. E. McClure, of the First Presbyterian Church, in the presence of the families and friends.

Mrs. Morris is a graduate of Goucher College and attended Bucknell University. She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority. The briedegroom, a graduate of Bucknell University, is a member of Phi Psi Fraternity and is assistant professor in the University of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris left on a motor trip and after April 25 will be at home in University avenue, New York.

Mt. Lebanon Girl Home For Easter Vacation

FASHION HAS NEW GIFTS FOR THE ULTRA-SMART WEEK-ENDER

It's the turn of the year. It's the time when Friday to Monday becomes the most exciting part of the week. It's the time when the railroad stations are full of people on Friday afternoon running to catch countrybound trains and the roads are crowded with cars heading for the great open spaces. Incidentally, it's the time when girls who know their niblicks are planning good, serviceable country clothes to take-week-ending with them.

IT'S NOT warm enough yet to think much of cottons, piques, and thinnish materials, Angoras, in lovely shades, closely woven, neat wools, shaggy tweeds and homespuns are what to center your attention on. It's bad business to go in for cheapness at this juncture. It's questionable economy at anytime, but downright criminal when you're dealing with things which can give you as good service and help you along as much in the world as good country clothes.

* * *

THE SWEATER on the left is the indispensable pull-over that you'll do well to equip yourself with. Lots of women are knitting them so as to have a good supply. This model gains dash from its paid linen hankie and linen belt. The model sketched was navy, worn with a grey skirt. It would be good also in black, turquoise with brown or any other combination you like.

THE UNTRIMMED angora suit in the center has just the right free and easy look, for tramping through the country, wearing for going away, or what you will. Then at the right there is a classic yellow angora sweater, ribbed to fit close at the bottom, loose enough in the armholes for a good golf swing. This sort of thing is very good over a matching pull-on or a T shirt.

Dietetic Association's Three-Day Convention To Open on Friday

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The three days of the Pennsylvania Dietetic Association's convention, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, will be packed with interests of a wide variety. After registration and the welcome by the president, Irene L. Willson, two films will be shown, one by a china company and the other by Miss Helen Gilson, director of dietetics at Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, and Dr. Leo Criep will speak on "Allergy."

Buses will carry the delegates to the H. J. Heinz Company for luncheon and in the afternoon Dr. Joseph Barach, of Falk Clinic, will speak on diabetes. Dinner at Carnegie Inn will be supplemented by a play in the Little Theater, Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Group discussions will follow breakfast on Saturday. Speakers that day will include Dr. C. G. King, of the University of Pittsburgh, who will discuss "Current Progress In Chemistry of Nutrition;" Sister Mary Placide, speaking on "What the Student Nurse Should Learn About Dietetics," and Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, of the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, on "Food Fads."

The afternoon sessions will be devoted to business. Dinner will be at the Montefiore Hospital and will precede a talk by Dr. R. A. Dutcher, professor of agricultural and biological chemistry, Pennsylvania State College.

Trips to the hospitals and tea at Seton Hill College, Greensburg, will fill Sunday.

W. C. T. U. Institute To Be Held in Wilkinsburg

A group institute will be conducted in the Wilkinsburg Y. W. C. A. Community House tomorrow by the borough Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Two sessions, one at 10 and the other at 1:30 o'clock, will be featured by addresses and a pageant. In the morning Mrs. W. M. Mains, state director of motion pictures, and Dr. Irvin D. Metzgar will speak.

In the afternoon the Wilkinsburg High School's drama club will present the pageant, "The Royal Crown," and Mrs. Melville W. Ghen, state director of child welfare, will make an address.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

INSURANCE MEN OPEN DRIVE AT MEET

Life insurance as a means of income was stressed before a rally breakfast in Hotel William Penn today in opening a national Financial Independence Week here.

Two speakers urged the more than 500 insurance officials and salesmen to carry the message of insurance during the week under a slogan of "Face the Future Unafraid." The speakers were Vincent B. Coffin, of Hartford, Conn., superintendent of agencies, Connecticut Mutual Life, and William Reis, Jr., local manager, Canada Life Assurance Company.

Radio talks through local as well as national programs are scheduled throughout the week. Homer L. Andrews spoke today from Station WWSW. Local speakers already scheduled over the same station are Holgar J. Johnson, trustee, National Life Underwriters' Association, Wednesday, 4:30 p. m.; L. C. Woods, Jr., Equitable Life Assurance, Thursday, 3:45 p. m., and H. T. Burnett, Reliance Insurance Company, Friday, 3:45 p. m.

Group rallies by various companies will be staged during the week, according to Eric G. Johnson, chairman of the local program committee. Prominent national speakers, including Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, are to be radio speakers.

COX HOLY YEAR MAIL ARRIVES

Stamp collectors and others who subscribed 25 cents each for the Father Cox Holy Year cachet, mailed from Vatican City on the opening day of this "Jubilee Extraordinary" proclaimed by Pope Pius XI, are enthusiastic and excited today. The cachet arrived in New York on Good Friday, the actual Nineteenth Centenary of the death of Christ and many of them were delivered to subscribers in Pittsburgh Saturday morning. Others will undoubtedly get them in their mail today as there was only one delivery in many communities outside of the downtown district Saturday.

Roselyn Miller Keenan who went to Rome as a special messenger for Father Cox with these 4,600 cacheted envelopes had the cooperation of Mons. Enrico Pucci, domestic prelate to the Pope and friend of Father Cox, in expediting the mailing. It was hoped that the new issue of Vatican City stamps would appear on the envelope but this issue was not released until April 4 and the cachets had to be mailed on April 2—the actual opening day of the Holy Year. The Sun-Telegraph co-operated with Father Cox in sponsoring the cachet which netted him about $700.00 for feeding his breadline.

Father Cox was given a check for $115.20 Saturday as commission in his subscription drive for the Sun-Telegraph. This sum represents a record-breaking week. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

Coal Production Exceeds Year Ago

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Bituminous coal production in the week ended April 8 declined from the previous week, but was greater than in the corresponding week of last year, according to figures released today by the United States Bureau of Mines. Production for the week was 4,865,000 tons, as compared with 5,136,000 tons in the week ended April 1, 1933, and with 4,645,000 tons in the week ended April 9, 1932. Daily average production was 811,000 tons in the week ended April 8, 1933, as compared with 901,000 tons in the previous week, and 774,000 tons a year ago.

Forbes

Upward Surge In Expectation Of Reflation

By B. C. FORBES

AN UPWARD surge has set in.

It has embraced sentiment, retail trade, commodities, securities, several important industries.

Mr. Forbes

WHAT ARE the underlying causes?

Supplementing—overshadowing — all others is a spreading conviction, here, and also abroad, that the effect of all that the government has done and plans to do will be, if not inflationary, at least reflationary.

TRUE, President Roosevelt has adamantly and very properly set his face against "starting up the printing presses" to flood the continent with paper money. Most of his closest advisors and many legislators, familiar with what befell other nations which embarked on stark inflation, realize that "you can't pay for something with nothing."

Therefore, this country is little likely to take the plunge over the perilous precipice of outright paper money inflation, a precipice ending in a hopeless fatal abyss.

BUT, sober minded business men, financiers, bankers, investors at home and abroad, reason that the bewildering multiplication of activities and of operations programmed by Washington will stimulate activity and rising prices, rising prices for farm products, for most raw materials, for shares, for speculative bonds, even for real estate.

I KNOW that certain wealthy men, who have kept their financial resources absolutely liquid for a long time have now begun to buy common stocks on a large scale, wheat, low priced bonds.

The security and commodity markets have had so many abortive recoveries during the last three years, that, naturally, one hesitates to jump to the dogmatic conclusion that at least a permanent forward movement is under way. But, the facts are as here stated.

IN THE HIGHEST financial circles, I find a disposition to wait for further developments at Washington.

After scoring three bull's eyes —banking, beer and economy— President Roosevelt's subsequent rapid fire proposals have been less effective. Most of them have encountered opposition. Some of them admittedly needed drastic revision.

Said one of America's most powerful private citizens last week:

"Conditions have improved. The outlook is regarded with less apprehension. But it is logical to hesitate, now, until the many-sided uncertainty at Washington and over Washington clarifies somewhat."

AMERICAN citizens never were confronted with such an abnormal number of momentous governmental innovations as are seething at Washington this moment. Some of the many which instantly spring to mind embrace more or less radical "reforms" affecting:

Artificial fixing of farm prices.
Tariffs.
Minimum wages.
A shorter work week.
Farm mortgages.
Home mortgages.
Vast public works.
Our banking system.
Issuance of new securities.
Short selling.
Gigantic governmental borrowing and refunding.
Anti-trust legislation.
Silver.
Railroads.
Motor transportation.
Taxation.
War debts.
Armaments.
Foreign borrowing here.

THE RECOVERY in commodities, securities and retail trade has already been sufficient to stimulate various industries and employment on a modest scale. As government capital expenditures expand, increased construction and other activities is anticipated. This, in turn, it is argued by those who have begun to invest in equities, will have a quickening effect upon business and industry in general, therefore upon employment and prices.

AUTO MISHAPS KILL 1; JAIL 5

Struck by an automobile at 2912 East street, Patrick McMulpern, 39, of 1503 Brighton road, died early today in Allegheny General Hospital of a fractured skull. Police said Dale A. Watson, of 400 Chestnut street, was the driver of the machine.

South Side police early today arrested John Breen, 20, of 358 Renova street, and Richard Forden, 20, of 311 Renova street, as joint owners of an automobile abandoned after it hit a pole in Riverton avenue, near Mifflin road. The ownership was traced through the license number on the machine, police said.

Three men were arrested by South Side police early today after an automobile in which they were riding collided with railroad guard gates at Twenty-eighth street and Arlington avenue. Frank Bonif, 22, of 2703 Arlington avenue, and Nick Milkowich, 22, of 2722 Sarah street, passengers in the machine, were bruised. They were arrested at South Side Hospital on a charge of drunkenness. Frank Serorick, 22, of 2703 Arlington avenue, driver, was arrested after he is said to have called police and reported his machine stolen. He was charged with violating the automobile laws.

Mrs. Marie Stewart, 45, of 5843 Center avenue, suffered lacerations early today when the automobile in which she was a passenger collided with a fence at 6524 Hamilton avenue. Mrs. Stewart was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital. Scott was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

Make This at Home

Be Individual . . . . Make Your Frocks

Pattern 2591

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

Follow the crowd when you choose cottons . . . everyone is wearing them . . . but follow your own individual taste when you select the frock. The model sketched today couldn't have been designed by cleverer fingers . . . it's virtually two frocks with only one pattern! The first one boasts a clever V-shaped band that buttons over the square neckline, and perky sleeve flares. The other striking versions omits these details, and voila—a perfect tennis and sports frock. Binding adds a smart trim. Pique, embroidered batiste, shantung, and others would be just the thing.

Pattern 2591 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions furnished with this pattern.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

SEND FOR THE ANNE ADAMS FASHION BOOK, showing Paris-inspired models for every sewing need—all practical and easy and economical to make. Exchange Moves to Make Market Corners Impossible

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

SQUEEZING SHORTS in the stock market appears likely to become a game of the past. The New York Stock Exchange has adopted a new device to prevent the creation of corners in its listed shares. For many years the exchange has been waging a fight to make corners impossible. With its activities under government scrutiny at present and with regulatory legislation expected, the board of governors is redoubling its efforts to keep a clean house.

There have been few cases of the creation of actual corners in stocks in the recent history of the exchange. There have, however, been times when the supplies of some stocks became artificially scarce and the shorts were driven to cover, usually with large losses.

The efforts of the exchange for many years have been devoted to the maintenance of a free and open market in its listed securities at all times. Under such conditions shorts would always be able to either borrow sufficient stock to maintain their position or else to cover without running prices up to a greater extent than should be expected from the volume of their buying.

Large Holders Must Guarantee to Lend

APPLICANTS TO LIST shares are being confronted with a new requirement by the exchange. The holders of the largest blocks of stocks must sign agreements to make their shares available for lending or to sell them if they are asked to by the committee on stock list.

Under the provisions of such an agreement, it would be practically impossible for a stock to be cornered or for exceptional pressure to be put upon a large short interest.

These agreements can only be imposed upon the large holders when new listing applications are being made. As a general rule such arrangements cannot be made where older listed stocks are concerned unless the company makes application for an additional listing or makes a change in its capitalization which requires a review by the listing committee.

Plan First Tried In Case of Auburn

AUBURN PROVIDED the first case in which it is known that the exchange used this device to prevent a corner. Over a period of time the price of Auburn showed strength which was in sharp contrast with the general trend of the market. The capitalization of the company is small. E. L. Cord, its president, and his associates were known to hold a dominant interest in the stock. The market actions of the issue were so surprising that gossip became current that a corner existed.

After an investigation over a year ago the exchange prevailed upon Cord to sign an agreement to lend or sell enough stock at any time to insure the existence of a free market.

Inland Advances Galvanized Sheets

CHICAGO, April 17—Inland Steel Company advanced the price of galvanized sheets $2 a ton, effective today, making the new base prices per hundredweight as follows: Pittsburgh, $2.70; Gary, $2.80, and Birmingham, $2.85. These prices apply to all new spot and contract business. This advance is accepted by all manufacturers of galvanized sheets. The recent rises of $20 a ton for scrap and $11 per ton for zinc is responsible for the advance in sheet prices.

Father Dies as Girl Sings Church Hymn

CHICAGO, April 17.—(INS.)—Just as his 4-year-old daughter, Janet, finished singing a solo hymn, Homer A. Marsh collapsed and died in the North Shore nondenominational church during Easter services yesterday. His death was attributed to heart failure.

INSTITUTE SEES RADIO SALES INCREASE

Pointing out that the radio market is chiefly dependent upon replacement demand, and estimating that the average life of a radio receiving set is five years, the Alexander Hamilton Institute, in its current bulletin, anticipates an increase in radio sales in 1933 over 1932.

The number of radio sets sold in 1932 totaled 2,620,000 as against 3,420,000 in 1931 and 4,438,000 in 1929.

The number of radio sets in use increased during 1932 from 16,125,000 to 16,810,000. This means that 685,000 sets were sold to new and multiple set buyers.

The life of a radio set at the present time is approximately five years. This is indicated by the fact that the number of sets in use at the end of 1932 was nearly equal to the number installed during the five-year period, 1928-1932. Replacements in 1933 should consequently approximate installation in 1928. Since installations in 1928 amounted to 3,281,000, the replacement demand in 1933 should be alone sufficient to result in an increase in sales over 1932 when total installations amounted to only 2,620,000.

In addition, it is logical to expect some new customers to enter the market since there are 30,000,000 families in the United States as compared with 16,810,000 radios.

New Passenger Car Sales Score Gain

Based on reports from 21 states, new passenger car sales in March were 75,000 units, compared to 69,464 in February and 92,192 in March, 1932, according to R. L. Polk & Co. Truck sales were 10,200 in March against 9,707 in February and 16,874 in March, 1932.

INSURANCE FIRM NAMES NEW UNIT CHIEF

William A. Arnold, II, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, has been appointed unit advisor of the Pittsburgh branch of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, it was announced today by Holgar J. Johnson, general agent.

Mr. Arnold

Mr. Arnold in the past four years has maintained an average of one life insured during each week. As unit advisor he will supervise a unit of new agents and recruits and train new men. Besides his record in the growth and development of the Penn Mutual agency, he is qualified for his new responsibilities by family tradition. His father, now a practicing physician, was formerly an agent in the Penn Mutual.

During the past month, Mr. Arnold's unit attained the agency trophy, indicating the largest percentage of its quota of all groups in the agency. The entire agency shows an increase in business during March, 1933, over the same period in 1932, Mr. Johnson said.

Girl Distance Flier In Second Accident

KARACHI, India, April 17.—(AP.)—Jean Batten, 23-year-old New Zealand girl attempting an England-to-Australia flight, suffered her second accident in three days when her plane cracked up near here yesterday. She was bruised.

Miss Batten had taken off from a field near Baluchi village after fitting a new propeller to her small biplane. Engine trouble overtook her and her craft glided into a stone fence.

BOGGS & BUHL

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: From enough sources, authentic and otherwise, I learn that Mrs. Rudy Vallee wasn't kidding—when she ha-ha'd over the suit for alienation of affections brought against her by one "Mrs. Kathleen Leon," allegedly the wife of Garry (Gustav to you!) Leon. The whole thing was a stunt—to take the edge off any sympathy for Mrs. Vallee, according to the arguments set forth by her friends . . . Also that there isn't any Mrs. Leon—and the thing has a foul smell, if you asked me, and even if you didn't! . . . I quote Fay Webb's pals, mind you, I'm not clairvoyant—nor certain—therefore use it only if you have your own suspicions . . . Rudy is playing the field, of course—and the unattached gals, as well as the attached ones, are primping or having their faces lifted, again . . . Irene Taylor, who canaries for Paul Whiteman, and on her own hook (up) is plotting for her freedom . . . Spring must be here!

You should have seen your eyes open wide when George Perry of the New York Yankees Baseball Club handed you that season pass to the Stadium . . . You're a little boy, Walter, playing Big Mans . . . Here's an item on Colonel Ruppert, who owns the Yanks, by the way . . . Whenever his team is getting a licking or the score is tied and the other side has two men on base and none out—he puts up his coat collar and pulls down his hat and slinks out of the place! . . . It makes him ill to see them come in second . . . Me, too, for that matter . . . That red cabbage at Moore's makes me so thirsty and that Graham Cracker pie at Billy La Hiff's is too good for actors! . . . Everything has been arranged for your convenience in Los Angeles if you go to the Coast in the Summer.

Little Jimmy Ritchie, the copy boy on the City News, who distinguished himself by getting Lieut.-Commander Wiley's official story before anybody else got it—even the Naval officials to whom it was radioed—says it feels swell to be "famous" . . . He says, however, he didn't deserve your praises, he was just lucky . . . Also that he didn't believe that anyone could be any happier after getting the bonus he received—until he saw his name in print in your "common" as Walda baby-talks it . . . At any rate, Jimmy Ritchie is a happy young man—and he is going to try and live up to your hero-worship . . . Harry Warren, one of the writers of "42nd Street," the song, is sorry you imagine that his tune is like "Puttin' on the Ritz" . . . He says there is absolutely no similarity . . . More interesting, however, is that he says he didn't lift the tune from Berlin's "Ritz" number, but confesses he borrowed it from "Cryin' for the Carolines," one of his own melodies—which he says antedates Berlin's song . . . Now, look what you've started . . . But how about "Happy Feet," from Whiteman's movie, "King of Jazz?"

That Ann Rush at the Ha-Ha Club has it, hasn't she? . . . They say she is a female "Louis Armstrong," or that she is like Helen Morgan, which she is and isn't . . . Notice that she never opens her eyes when she cries the heart-tuggers? . . . Your friends, the Selbys, are among the dancing hits at Jack Lynch's rendezvous in Philly . . . Ben Marden's Riviera across the Washington Bridge, is plotting a big show . . . Betty Healy is Guinaning up at the Old Colonial Inn in the 60s—and if John Royal at NBC would be generous to the millions of radio tuner-inners on WEAF and WJZ he'd lose no moments clinching the 3 Roberts . . . Their theme song (their own) soothes me so—and when Marty (the one on the piano), strums that tenor guitar as he Bing Crosbys—"I Don't Stand a Ghost of a Chance With You"—that's when I want to Confess All! . . . At Dan Healy's and Jack White's new 52nd St. spot, of course.

The editors of Cosmopolitan thank you for getting sore about Alexander Woollcott's expose of you in the current May issue—and they trust that you consider yourself scoided at last . . . Helen Rowland of the Journal wishes you would clear up the puzzle about the Helen Rowland on the radio . . . Helen wishes you'd make it clear that the radio Rowlands are not the editors of "The Marry-Go-Round," the best of that sort of newspaper column . . . She is due back in the gazettes in May, by the way. Now, the Helen Rowland of the radio, who was fired from the "Rise of the Goldbergs" program—has a letter from NBC praising her talents . . . But someone up there sent out word to radio editors that she wasn't "good enough" . . . That's mean.

The newspaper editor who wiped out a "clip joint" the other night (and stayed up all night with cops to do it) was Stanley Walker. . . . It burned him up because his friend, Thomas E. Armstrong, captain of the Harvard varsity crew—was "taken" for plenty and beaten. . . . Amazing how they found the spot, again. The Harvard man couldn't remember it, so the editor took him on a cab ride up this street and down that one and so on—until his friend recalled familiar scenes. . . . In less time than it takes to "take a sucker"—they found it—and the wise guys who did the low-down trick—are still in bandages in their respective cages. . . . So half an orchid to Stanley Walker—half because he avenged a Harvard man.

Many of the Governors and Mayors have issued Proclamations making April 30th "President's Day" and Congress has joined in the spirit of the thing to show FDR that the entire country is grateful for his being in the White House. They have holidays in the foreign countries set aside in honor of their leaders—why not in these United States? . . . What I like best about the whole plan, however, is that more people will see the inside of a church for the first time—on April 30th—and maybe they'll like the spiritual comfort they find in them—to go again the following Sabbath . . . In other words, it should be both a spiritual and gay holiday—with dancing in the streets—because President Roosevelt has done so much to erase the gloom that was shadowing the nation . . . It's just a great big orchid to Mrs. Roosevelt's big boy, Franklin—and it must be a grand thrill.

Mother

Diana Wynyard plays a mother role and leading character in "Cavalcade," which will show for the first time at popular prices in the Fulton, beginning Thursday.

'Madame Butterfly' Great in Japan

An unparalleled newspaper tribute from Japan is paid Paramount's "Madame Butterfly" by the "Japan Advertiser," issue of March 20. This important paper, which is printed in English in Tokio, states that "Madame Butterfly" partly because of the picture itself, but principally because of its unparalleled performances, is the greatest commercial film ever shown in Japan. It substantiates this by pointing out that the previous longest run of a picture was that of 19 days made by "Wings," while at the time the newspaper went to press "Madame Butterfly" was in its nineteenth day and was expected to run for four weeks and possibly five.

Club Plans Welcome For Dick Powell

Plans are being made to provide a rousing "welcome home" for Dick Powell when he arrives in Pittsburgh April 28 for his dance engagement at Duquesne Garden. Members of the Pow-Wow Club, a radio club he organized when he first came to Pittsburgh, are planning a large turnout and will greet him at the Pennsylvania Station. There will be a parade through town, climaxed by a luncheon.

Spencer Tracy to Lead In 'The American'

Spencer Tracey will play the leading role in "The American," the Sol M. Wurtzel production for Fox, the story of which was suggested by incidents in the life of the late Mayor Anton Cermak. Following completion of his work opposite Colleen Moore in Preston Sturges' "The Power and the Glory," Tracy will begin his part in "The American." Hamilton MacFadden is directing this production which was written by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti.

Gay Nineties Story for Irene

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, April 17.—Triumphantly the movies continue in their rediscovery of the gay nineties. RKO joints the parade with the purchase of "Frivolous Sal," for Irene Dunne.

This screen original by Norman Houston, will feature the amusing costumes, the old songs and even some of the real characters of the times.

Above everything else, it will give the star a chance to capitalize upon her beautiful voice. Music is the rage again, and song writers once more are starting to congregate in the film capital.

Miss Dunne

Whether "Frivolous Sal" will be ready in time for Irene's next picture is still undetermined. Sam Jaffee, who'll be associate producer on the story, is bringing its author to RKO to work on the adaptation.

The applicants for the last citizenship test included Gordon Westcott's Swedish maid.

She answered several questions correctly and then the examiner asked:

"Do you know the constitution?"

Flushed with success, the maid beamed.

"Sure," she said, "it's that old battleship down in the harbor."

* * *

Two young men you should remember, Lincoln Steadman and Cleve Moore (Colleen's brother), are doing a thriving business renting bicycles to the devotees of the screen colony's latest fad. They have bought a concession from the Hotel Ambassador here and have established a half-mile course on the grounds. Rochelle Hudson, Dorothy Lee, Billy Taft and many of the film younger set keep the 20 bicycles so busy that Lincoln and Cleve have put in a rush order for another allotment.

Miss Hudson

Just to prove she hasn't gone completely conservative, Katharine Hepburn showed up on the RKO lot wearing blue-linen overalls with a lighter blue coat to match . . . Jack La Rue, who has been giving Jack Oakie a race for Peggy Joyce's company, was showing both Peggy and Jean Acker the sights at the Club Ballyhoo the other evening . . . Ben Blue, the vaudevillian, is to open as master of ceremonies at this late spot Wednesday.

English companies were willing to pay on the line for Boris Karloff in a second picture, but Universal said no. The star will be returning to Hollywood in May to make "The Invisible Man" . . . More than 100 people called up a local broadcasting station asking to speak to Mae West when she went on the air . . . They'll tell you that the dignified Ruth Chatterton took beaucoup cartons of American gum on her European trip. Like Will Rogers, Ruth is a confirmed addict.

Miss Chatterton

Director Howard Hawks will enter a car in the Indianapolis races this year. Besides directing pictures, Howard is an expert on motors. He builds them in his own workshop . . . The waggish Grover Jones sent Tom Geraghty a box of cigars on his birthday. The cellophane cover on each cigar carried the printed words: "The Joneses gave you these" . . . It's going to be a big night at the Domino dance on the seventeenth . . . Dorothy Jordan has rented a beach house in Palos Verdes, at the opposite end of things from Malibu . . . Incidentally, more than 70 cottages are going begging at this famous resort. Or were the other day.

You're going to see the best picture Marion Davies ever made in "Peg O' My Heart." Some people thought this sentimental play by J. Hartley Manners wouldn't make good entertainment in these realistic days. They're going to get a big surprise. "Peg O' My Heart" has box-office written all over it. The music is going to make a hit too. And Marion never gave a more sincere performance. A tip for you, too. Watch Onslow Stevens, who plays her leading man. This picture ought to set him well up on the cinema ladder.

Miss Davies

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Business

Gloria Stuart will be seen in support of Lionel Barrymore, starred in "Sweepings," when that film of a business story opens Friday in the Warner.

After Two Years

VILMA BANKY WILL END A TWO-YEAR ABSENCE FROM THE SCREEN IN "THE REBEL"

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"When Ladies Meet" will reopen the Nixon tonight, when the first Pittsburgh performance of this Rachel Crothers comedy, presented as the fifth subscription play of the American Theater Society, will be given. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. One of the long-run hits of the current New York season, "When Ladies Meet" brings the original cast intact for this Easter week engagement. It includes Selena Royle, Walter Abel, Spring Byington, Frieda Inescourt, Herbert Rawlinson, Auguste Armini and Robert Lowes, who played here several years ago as a member o fthe George Sharp Stock Company in the Pitt. "When Ladies Meet," by the way, has been awarded the 1933 medal of the Theater Club of New York, which annually makes such award to what its members vote the best American play of the season. It will be presented at the annual social day of the club in the Hotel Astor, New York, next Tuesday, April 25.

This week is the last one of rehearsal of "All To the Point." twenty-sixth annual production of the Pitt Cap and Gown Club, to be presented in the Nixon all next week. Like all of the club's recent stage ventures, "All To the Point" is a musical play, the setting of which is Fort Pitt in colonial days. It is a romance, and its scenes include Smithfield street of that early time, Fort Pitt, Greentree Inn, and Pittsburgh Academy, the educational acorn from which the University of Pittsburgh grew. Among the costumes will be those that were used here in the historical skits in "Humpty Dumpty" and discarded when Schwab and De Sylva, after it's one week here last fall, rebuilt the thing and re-entered it in the theatrical arena as "Take a Chance." There will be no matinees of "All To the Point."

Helen Hayes Is All Fed Up With Tragic Parts

By WILLIAM T. M'CLEERY

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP.)—Helen Hayes, motion picture actress now back in her home town, confesses she's tired of playing talkie tragedies.

"Every picture I've played has had a sad ending," she mourns. "I'd like some variety."

Miss Hayes, called back to Washington by her father's illness, seemed perfectly at home in the modest living room of a small brick bungalow.

"My next picture is supposed to be sad, too," Miss Hayes explains.

She'd like to do "Another Language," but suspects she'll do "another tragedy" instead. The trouble with Hollywood, says Miss Hayes, is mass production.

"The directors are real artists, capable and imaginative, but they have to work with scenarios that are still being written, and fight deadlines like newspapermen.

"For some reason it seems that 50 pictures can be produced at no more expense than 30," she says. "So they're paying more attention to quantity than quality."

Miss Hayes believes young actors and actresses have a better chance to get into the legitimate theater now than ever before.

"The theater has never been so open," she holds. "Most of the well-known artists are being taken to Hollywood, leaving opportunities for new talent."

Although the theater has been hard-hit, she believes it will never be replaced by talkies or radio.

HOME LOAN PLAN AWAITED HERE

More than 350 building and loan associations in Allegheny County are watching closely for developments on President Roosevelt's proposal to refinance mortgages on small homes and for the formation of a new chain of Federal Savings and Loan associations.

It is generally felt that the Pittsburgh district is so thoroughly covered with building and loan associations that none of the new Federal units will be formed in this territory.

However, many of the Pittsburgh building and loans are eligible for membership in the new chain through their connection with the Federal Home Loan Bank here.

Businessmen Give Baskets to Orphans

An Easter basket for each child is the gift a group of Troy Hill businessmen make each Easter time to St. Joseph's Home and Orphanage. More than 250 children were made happy by baskets.

The men, assisted by firemen of Troy Hill, make the baskets, color the eggs, and fill them at the engine house. Alderman Edward H. Simon gave the baskets to the children.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Backache a Trouble That Shouldn't Be Neglected

Dr. Copeland

Backache is a common and disabling condition. It is not a disease but a symptom or sign of some disturbance in the body. It is too often incorrectly called "lumbago," and neglected.

Backache may be one sign of several different conditions. To decide upon the cause several factors must be taken into consideration. First of these is the location of the pain. Character of the pain, time of its occurrence and duration, are other factors that must not be overlooked. It is necessary to determine if there is any local tenderness. You must try to discover any event or act that is followed by an attack of backache.

A common type is the backache due to a sprain of the "sacro-iliac articulation." This is a sensitive joint located at the lowest portion of the spine. It marks the place of contact between the spine and the hipbone.

The strain is caused by a fall, blow or sudden twist. In such cases the attacks are brought on by long-continued standing, bending, reclining or sitting. Although the pain is localized in the joint, the discomfort is more than that of a general backache.

Backache is frequently due to arthritis, or inflammation of a joint. Often the inflammation can be traced to a focal infection quite distant from the back. It may be due to infected teeth, tonsils or sinuses, or to some other localized infection in the body.

Diseases of the kidney, particularly stone in the kidney, may produce vague, persistent and annoying backache. In other cases it may be traced to constipation, improper posture, faulty diet and overweight. Relief can only be hoped for when the underlying cause is determined and removed.

Too often the sufferer resorts to home remedies and patent medicines for the relief of pain. Though the pain is deadened by their use, the cause is not removed and the relief is temporary. Permanent cure can be obtained only by a complete examination and careful search for the cause of the pain.

X-ray pictures aid the physician to determine the exact cause of the backache. If it is due to a sacro-iliac strain, this joint will appear stretched in the picture. Arthritis will reveal definite signs of inflammation of the joint. When stones of the kidney are suspected, an X-ray picture will reveal them.

In cases of weak back where the X-ray picture reveals no changes and pain is caused by the slightest exertion, mechanical support of the back is required. There are many appliances and devices for the relief of this type of backache. In most instances a simple corset or abdominal belt gives adequate support and is as beneficial as other more expensive braces.

Backache should never be neglected. Respect the health of your body and heed all the warning signs given you by nature. The trouble can be cured when immediate attention is given. It is more difficult to cure if allowed to become chronic. Consult with your physician, who will advise you and prescribe the necessary treatment.

Answers to Health Queries

H. C.—Q.—What can be done to overcome stuttering? I have been afflicted in this way for some time. I am 20 years old and this trouble has persisted since I was nine years of age.

GIRL IN BALM SUIT WEDS

WAYNESBURG, Pa., April 17.—A happy ending has arrived for the love affairs of Miss Anna Ruth Lemley, of Jollytown, near here, it became known today.

Last December, Miss Lemley felt her heart had been injured in the game of love, and brought balm suit against Frank Barnes, of this place.

When the case was called, Miss Lemley refused to testify.

MUSIC

Pittsburgh Symphony Society

Syria Mosque

The Pittsburgh Symphony Society closed its seventh season last night with a Wagnerian program. Syria Mosque was filled to the rafters and the applause was hearty for both orchestra and soloists. For Easter music nothing could be happier than these wonderful scores of Wagner, full of nature's echoings and the cries of gods.

Mr. Lissfelt

How proudly we can speak of our conductor Modarelli after such a program. It was a gigantic task, and remembering the scanty rehearsals with his men, almost a superhuman task. And with the opening bars of the "Meistersinger" we were reassured as to the outcome of the evening.

It is true our players want more finesse for the "Siegfried Forest Murmurs" and the ever mounting passion of the "Liebestod" from "Tristan," but consider the excellent accompaniment during that "Walkure" scene and the dignity of the "Tannhaeuser" pilgrims if you should like to know the growth of this orchestra!

PROGRAM
Good Friday Spell from "Parsifal"
Forest Murmurs from "Siegfried"
"Liebestod" from "Tristan and Isolde"
Dance of the Apprentices from "Die Meistersinger"
Scene III, Act I, from "Die Walkure"
Elsa Alsen and Paul Althouse
Overture to the Opera, "Tannhaeuser"

Elsa Alsen, soprano, and Paul Althouse, tenor, both of whom are well known here for their good works, contributed much to the success of the concert. The voices are excellently adapted as individuals and in unison for the work they sang last night.

Their approach to the music is that of the best Wagnerian singers with this difference, that they actually sing it better than more heralded stars. Last night's performance had tremendous sweep, they preserved the loveliest lyric quality for the opening "Spring Songs" and led on to a gorgeous climax with the sword music, when the orchestra too did an astonishingly subtle accompaniment.

Scott Considered for Lieutenant Governor

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, April 17.—Senator Harry B. Scott, of Centre County, who is to be elected president pro-tem of the Senate when and if the Legislature adjourns, may not preside at the next session.

Mr. Shields

For Senator Scott is under serious consideration as a Republican organization candidate for Lieutenant Governor, no matter who heads the ticket. A regular of regulars, Senator Scott has friends in various factional camps and would be acceptable to more than one of the various gentlemen who fancy themselves as the only patriots worthy to be Governor of the commonwealth.

Senator Scott has been in the Senate since 1927. Before that he served in the House, but there was a long recess between his two tours of Harrisburg duty. In the last two sessions he has been chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, a position of authority and power. Some of his Republican colleagues contend he has at times deferred to Gov. Pinchot's demands, refusing to coincide in cuts as deep as they would make in the operation of the Governor's departments.

But the Senator has never been a Pinchot sympathizer. He has been firm against appropriations of which he did not approve.

For example, he held up for weeks the appropriation of $100,000 for the Senate Utilities Investigating Committee. Members of the committee asked him to report the measure out, but he flatly declined.

Not until Oliver K. Eaton resigned as counsel for this committee did Scott let the measure see daylight, and then he had the promise from Gov. Pinchot that it would be signed.

Devlin to Assume Compensation Post

As exclusively foretold in this column two weeks ago, J. Howard Devlin, member of the Pittsburgh Civil Service Commission, today will become manager of the state workmen's insurance fund, a position which has paid $7,500 a year, but which will be cut if the legislative economy program goes through.

Devlin succeeds W. Jack Stitler, who was Pinchot manager for Dauphin County in the 1930 gubernatorial primary, and rode to preferment on that victory.

Recently, however, he has fallen into disfavor. Representative Philip Sterling, close to the Pinchot administration, told the House sometime ago that the fund has been mismanaged, but that the successor of Stitler would be

Gabriel Over the White House

Adapted from the novel, "Gabriel Over the White House," and from the motion picture produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer —a Cosmopolitan production.

CHAPTER XIII.

Early in December the British Ambassador announced that he was resigning to return to England because of continued ill health.

I was not surprised, therefore, when the White House telephoned to say that the President intended calling on the sick Ambassador to bid him farewell. I detailed a section of Green Jackets to co-operate with the Washington police as a motorcycle escort, and thought no more about it.

Among the reports I had read that morning was one from Corporal Cassidy. He had discovered the hideout of "Goldie" Rosenbaum in St. Paul, but not until after his quarry had bolted. From various sources he had collected information which made it appear that the man she was living with was "Wolf" Miller.

Later we were to learn that "Goldie," blinded and choked with smoke, had dragged the wounded and unconscious gangster into the cellar of the burning house at Cicero and through a secret tunnel of whose existence "Wolf" had informed her only the previous day.

The tunnel was built for the purpose of evading police raids. Nearly a quarter of a mile long, it emerged into a wooden outhouse on a neighboring estate. In this shed was kept in readiness a high-powered closed automobile. The girl waited there for hours, half-mad with terror, but doing what she could for her lover. In the early hours of the morning she lifted his inert body into the car and drove away without interference.

Cruel to Girl

Her life after that must have been a long, drawn-out purgatory. "Wolf," ruined, broken and hunted, his brain affected by the bullet wound, became a fiend incarnate. He suffered from violent headaches, the pain of

All These Spies Must Be Spying Upon Something

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

War secrets have been bought, sold and exchanged on a rising market. Nations are suspicious, and a tourist with a dollar camera can get himself a military escort past any given point.

Yet all the nations are at peace. They ain't doing a thing. But they get sore if you find it out.

One more peace conference and the boys will be ready.

After that oratorical wave of diplomatic skirmishers sweeps over the field it is then you can expect the knockers-down and the moppers-up.

Nailing a spy in times of peace means something. They never arrest a man for locking at nothing.

MOTHER IN MILLVALE BALKS OPERATION ON SMALL SON

CALLS DOCTORS CRAZY, WON'T GIVE UP BOY

Mrs. Mary Lesic, Millvale mother, today tore a page from the experiences of Mrs. Anna Vasco, of Hastings, N. Y., who fled the law rather than submit her daughter to an operation.

Refusing all requests to return her sick 3-year-old son to Children's Hospital for medical treatment, although the doctors say his life is in danger, she declared today:

"I'm going to do the same as the mother in New York. She didn't let the doctors take her girl away, and I'm not going to let them take Billy away."

Looking toward William as he played in the Lesic home, 248 Arlington street, with his brother, George, 4, she added:

"If my little boy is sick, I'm going to take care of him at home. I will not let him go back to the hospital. Those doctors are crazy."

DOCTORS' WARNING

Doctors at Children's Hospital said their diagnosis showed the child has tuberculosis of the spine. They said they warned Mrs. Lesic against taking the boy away and explained that he will become deformed unless properly treated.

Judge Benjamin Lencher, newest member of County Court, today added his voice to the controversial case that will be heard Wednesday or Thursday in Juvenile Court. He is to preside at the case. Declaring that there is need for a law that would give the court authority in such cases, he said:

"How can we compel the parents to submit their child to an operation or medical care. I'm afraid that it is pretty nearly impossible under the present laws."

A new Juvenile Court bill that has passed the House and will be considered by the State Senate this week, was praised by Judge Lencher. Of the bill, which would give the court virtual parental authority over children, he said.

"With all necessary regard to the emotional feeling of the parents, I think that it is the duty of society to take into regard the health of all children needing medical or surgical care."

NEW COURT PLAN

If passed, the bill will set up a new Juvenile Court. It would be known as Children's Court and would be entirely separate from County Court. It would have one judge at its head who would have complete jurisdiction over all delinquent, dependent and neglected children.

State Senator William D. Mansfield, of McKeesport, said he would favor the bill only if certain of its provisions are safeguarded.

TWO 'DESERT' JOB ARMY CAMP

By JOHN B. HERRON
Special Correspondent

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., April 17.—Several boys of the Civilian Conservation Corps encamped here for training have tried to return home.

One got five miles from camp before he changed his mind and came back. The other turned in his outfit and left, but was brought back, questioned and then allowed to leave. He departed on foot.

There are only six boys in the hospital, and none is really ill.

Of the 212 fellows in the 304th Company, there is not a Smith!

They issued bats, mush balls, volley balls, horseshoes and pegs, and fields are available for the use of them.

First Forest Army Deserter Back Home, Criticizes Plan

Pittsburgh's first deserter from the Forest Army was back home today ready to join another army—the army of the unemployed.

He is Mickey Scarpino, 20, of 36 Chatham street.

Five days at Fort Monroe, Va., was enough, if not too much, according to Scarpino. He hiked from Fort Monroe to Richmond, got a lift by automobile to Baltimore, and rode a freight back to Pittsburgh.

He was asked:

"What was wrong with the Forest Aarmy—didn't you like it?"

He replied without hesitation:

"I didn't like the food, the barracks or the clothes. They gave me a pair of overalls, a big hat and a pair of heavy army shoes. I had to get up at 5 a. m., make my own bed, stand in line for meals and then spend the day policing up the grounds.

"What am I going to do now? Look for a job."

SEX DISCUSSED AT COURTSHIP CLASSES

International News Service.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 17.—Free and open discussion of sex problems, group awakening of the social consequences of "love making and home building" and "heroizing" of the boy who sacrifices personal preferences in order to dance with "wall flowers."

These are the practical results today of experiments in Utah High School courtship classes instituted more than a year ago in Sanpete and Sevier counties, according to Dr. E. E. Ericksen, philosophy professor at Utah University.

Prof. Ericksen, for 20 years teacher of sociological subjects at the state institution, started the classes to prove his theory "that individualism in matters of courtship is an inadequate philosophy for the twentieth century and we need a new deal in treating the deepest emotion of the human race."

So far, he says, the courses have been successful enough to warrant recommendation for their inclusion in the curricula of all state high schools.

The college savant abhors the interpretation that he advocates a scientific courtship or adoption of a standardized formula for young men and women in "building their love nest."

Prof. Ericksen said:

"When I organized the first class, discussion of sex problems was taboo. Adolescent youth was encountering social situation with which he was utterly unable to cope. He was thrown in contact with dangers which nothing in his experience had taught him to recognize and avoid.

"Such situations conclude either with illicit relations or with ill-advised marriages that are physically, temperamentally and educationally inharmonious and which terminate in divorce."

After the year's course there developed open and frank discussions among the students themselves on sex problems with stress on the social consequences of love making and mating, he said.

HINT OPERATION FOR BABY GIRL

HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., April 17.—(INS.)—The pinch of poverty and a belated conviction that, after all, the doctors may be right promised to win the "eye for a life" battle over baby Helen Vasco today.

Friends of the Vasco family, missing from their home since Saturday, said the father, John Vasco, was ready to take the infant to Grasslands Hospital at Yonkers immediately if the Appellate Court should order an operation on little Helen's eyes. She is suffering from a tumor of the left eye which surgeons say will cause her death unless the eye is removed soon.

These friends said the Vascos had not gone to visit relatives near Pottsville, Pa., as they had intended on Saturday. They did not have the funds to get there. Instead, the Vascos spent the week-end with friends in North Yonkers, it was said, and are now planning to return to their home.

The mother, Mrs. Anna Vasco, remains bitterly opposed to the proposed operation, friends said, and clings to her "better death than blindness" doctrine.

POLITICS

Devlin is a lawyer, and by some of his friends is said to be taking the appointment "for experience."

He is the Democratic member of the Civil Service Commission, but is closer to Senator Frank J. Harris, a Republican, than to any Democrat in Allegheny County. His appointment is directly attributed to the Crafton Senator. Harris has been a legislative supporter of the Governor, but until this time has received no substantial recognition in return for his support.

Democrats See No Victory in Selection

The new state official is a former president of the Amen Corner, and has as many friends among Republicans as Democrats.

As a matter of fact, the Democrats who have been co-operating with the Governor in this session do not view the Devlin appointment as a Democratic sop. It is by no stretch of the imagination payment for help thus far from the minority group.

Appointment of Mr. Devlin to a state position will open the way for Mayor John S. Herron to fill the Civil Service vacancy with some Democrat on whom he might count in the general election next November, should he win the Republican Mayoralty nomination.

The opportunity might be afforded to weaken the Democratic battlefront. It is accepted that the Democrat named will be approved by Senator James J. Coyne, whose past relations with some wings of the Democratic party has been close, and politically not unprofitable.

'POPEYE' IN FAIR PUPPET SHOW

When the World's Fair opens in Chicago, Popeye, the Sun-Telegraph comic strip character with the potent wallop, will be among those present as a marionette. Even now, in a studio in the Commercial Building, Jean Gros and his assistants are busy painting the scenery and rigging the characters of "Shipwrecked," a play in which Popeye slaps down many an African cannibal. "Shipwrecked" and another play starring Mickey Mouse will show daily on the Enchanted Isle—Chicago World's Fair midway of amusements.

More than 50 marionettes are in the cast, controlled by a crew of puppeteers using more than 4,000 strings.

Friday afternoon, Mr. Gros will show a few of his puppet "Babies" and speak on the subject, "How to Make a Marionette Show" at the Theater Arts Exhibit sponsored by the Drama League at Kaufmann's. Popeye himself isn't quite ready to be a marionette just yet, but the cannibals will be ready to perform.

500 Welsh Singers To Hold Fete Here

A Gymanfa Ganu or sacred song festival is to be held in Smithfield German Evangelical Church May 15, with more than 500 Welsh singers from all parts of the state participating.

It is under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Gymanfa Ganu Association. Dr. John Jones Evans, composer and conductor of the Orpheus Male Chorus of Wilkes-Barre, will be guest conductor.

GABRIEL OVER THE WHITE HOUSE

which he tried to deaden by heavy drinking. During these bouts he beat the girl and sent her on the streets to earn money for whisky. Often they were short of food, and more frequently homeless.

Despite all this horror, "Goldie" stuck faithfully to her man—"Goldie," who had once been known from one end of Chicago to the other as the flashiest, most recklessly extravagant woman who had ever decorated that city's underworld. In all their vicissitudes "Wolf" somehow managed to keep his automobile. Occasionally it was used for a night holdup or smash-and-grab robbery in some small town. To "Wolf" it meant his only means of escape and he valued it above anything else.

Things had been going a little better for them when Cassidy spotted "Goldie" at the movie show in St. Paul. Miller, now calling himself Al Morton, was over the most violent stage of his illness and had become sullen and morose. His ugly, distorted mouth was partially hidden by a new-grown, unkempt mustache. Evil and a sense of personal hurt looked out of his blood-streaked eyes. But to "Goldie" this was a miraculous change from the beatings and ravings of the earlier period. She had given up the streets and now was earning good money as a waitress in an uptown restaurant.

Flee From Police

It was an unfortunate chance that had taken her, with one of the girls with whom she worked, to that movie show on her evening off. She sensed rather than knew that there was danger from those two flirtatious Green Jackets, and foolishly she confided her uneasiness to Miller.

For endangering him by coming back to their room before making certain that she was not being followed, she was thrashed with a coiled clothes line until she collapsed.

An hour later a thoroughly cowed and bruised "Goldie" was hustled into the automobile which sped south through Minnesota and Wisconsin toward Illinois. "Wolf" Miller was again on the run.

Cassidy traced them to Madison, to Peoria, to South Bend. They were said to have been seen in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. After that they had apparently disappeared for days.

The report I was now reading had been forwarded from Baltimore. Cassidy felt he was close on their tracks. A car, containing a man and a woman resembling "Wolf" and "Goldie," had drawn up at a garage on the outskirts of that city late the night before. Two new tires had been fitted on the worn rear wheels and the tank filled with gasoline. Thereupon, the driver had knocked the lone garage attendant over the head with a jack handle and driven off without paying.

The hospitable old couple who accomodated tourists at their small house a few miles outside of the Maryland town of Rockville were filled with a puzzled and uneasy curiosity with regard to their only guests that night.

Owners Alarmed

The man and his wife had arrived about two in the morning and after much knocking had roused the sleeping proprietor and demanded a room. Both looked travel-stained and ill. The woman's face was drawn and white and she had dark hollows under her eyes.

The man looked downright crazy. His blood-streaked eyes glared and he seemed unable to control a twitching muscle in his right cheek.

The householder's wife had gone up next morning to ask about breakfast, only to be abused by a snarling voice from the other side of the locked door. Her husband carried up the woman's breakfast, and his fat, genial face was agape with stupefaction and alarm when he returned to the kitchen.

"That's a queer couple we got upstairs," he said to his wife.

She emphatically agreed. "I never heard such cussing in all my born days, and just because I asked what they wanted to eat."

"Yes," went on the man, "but there's more than that. When I took up the food just now—what d'ye think? I saw the man loading a revolver. It's agin the law to have a gun and I'm taking no risks. I'm going to call the police at Rockville."

"Wolf" came downstairs, threw some money on the table, glowered at the terrified couple, snarled something about keeping their mouths shut, and went out with "Goldie." They had been gone half an hour when a local constable made his leisurely arrival.

It was past noon when "Wolf" turned his car into a lonely side road and stopped it well out of sight of the highway. He had emptied his flask and wanted more whisky. "Goldie," tried to restrain him. "Cut it, Wolf. You know you drank all night, and haven't eaten a bite."

Blames President

He shook her off and snarled, "Shut your damn trap and leave me alone. It's all because of you that we're in this mess. You and your movies! Get that damned bottle and get it quick." He glared at her with such hatred and fury that "Goldie," cowering from him, found herself reaching over into the rear of the car for the last bottle of whisky.

He drank the raw stuff in noisy gulps. His head was hurting again and he sat holding it in his hands, rocking too and fro.

"Goldie" offered to drive and let him get some sleep, but he appeared not to hear. Suddenly he turned to her. She noted a strange light in his eyes and became desperately afraid. He was mad! Not mad drunk as so often he was. But now the last frail cord that had kept his drunk-inflamed faculties within the orbit of reason had snapped.

As she shrank from him he commenced talking in a hurried monotone. He asked questions but expected no replies. "Who's to blame for all this? Why should I be starved and hunted like a rat by these damned Greenies? Who ordered my place burnt and put this pain in my head? Who's to blame? Who? Tell me—tell me. Who?

He leaned toward her. His reeking breath made her feel sick. "You won't tell me? Well, I'll tell you. Hammond—that's who! The yellow dog who hadn't the guts to come and fight me himself—he's responsible for all this."

Wants Vengeance

He straightened up in his seat. His voice was now a muffled shriek of frenzy. "President Hammond, eh? Well, damn him, I'll show him! I'll call his bluff. He thinks I'm dead but I'll show him 'Wolf' Miller is still very much alive. I'll put him in hell yet!"

He took out his gun and spun it in his hand. "Goldie," ashen with fear, tried furtively to open the door of the car. Just as she had succeeded in turning the handle he leaned over to her once more. For a second she thought he had detected what she was doing, but apparently he hadn't. "Open that bag back there and get out my blue suit and the grey hat. I got to be all dolled up when I pay my respects to the President." He laughed brokenly.

For a moment she did not gasp the implication of what he had said. When she did, she began to plead in frenzied incoherences. "Wolf, hon, lie down and rest. See, I'll drive, and you have a nice sleep. Let me wet this cloth and put on your poor head."

"Wolf" silenced her with a cruel backhanded slap on her mouth. A thin trickle of blood oozed from her cut lip. She half stood up to make a last effort. "You can't do this, Wolf—Wolf, it means the chair for certain; it means the—"

But Miller had had enough. He cut into her hysterical pleading by lashing out with his right foot, catching her at the waist. She crashed against the unfastened door, fell into the road, and there lay still.

Miller looked down at her and gabbled obscenities. He flung the empty whisky bottle at her crumpled body and slammed the door to. Then with miraculous steadiness, considering his condition, he started the motor, turned the car around on the narrow side-road and a minute later was bowling along the main highway leading into Washington.

Finds Gas Leak With Match; He'll Recover

FAYETTE CITY, Pa., April 17.—(AP.)—A. Livi, 51, fruit store proprietor, today was in bed recovering from the results of striking a match in his cellar.

Livi said he smelled gas and struck the match to see if the leak was in his hot water heater. It was.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

BUCCANEERS WELCOME EXTRA DAY OF REST

DEMPSEY, SCHMELING HAILED HERE BY THRONGS

Dempsey and Schmeling Meet Old Friends Here—Work Out on Radio Globe Trotter

JACK DEMPSEY FRANK KLAUS MAX SCHMELING AL GRAYBER

Dempsey and Schmeling, former heavyweight champions, in Pittsburgh today for their exhibition at Motor Square Garden tonight. Klaus, who lives in Braddock, is a former middleweight champion of the world, and Schmeling knew all about him through having read of his bouts with Georges Carpentier and others in Paris more than a score of years ago. Grayber, local referee, boxed with Dempsey in the movies in California a half-dozen years ago, and both laughed today as they recalled a time when Grayber knocked off Dempsey's makeup and work on the picture was held up. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

MAX SCHMELING LOUIS L. KAUFMAN JACK DEMPSEY

The former champions, who, with Schmeling's manager, Joe Jacobs, broadcast over WCAE and WJAS with Louis L. Kaufman, the Globe Trotter, at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon, appear to have the great Louie in a tough spot here, ready to knock him right out of the state of Pennsylvania. It seems Louie said he could lick someone or other, whereupon he was immediately put on the spot. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

PIE'S FORM MEANS MUCH TO PIRATES

THE MOST PLEASING feature of the three straight victories with which the Pirates have gained possession of first place in the National League race has been the strength shown at spots about which originally there was some question. Heinie Meine's letdown Saturday after allowing only two hits in five innings means that the veteran needs only a little more preparation and some warmer weather to be dependable for the route. Hal Finney's fine catching demonstrated that the club will not be left weak behind the bat when Earl Grace is out of commission.

Pie Traynor

And the great work of Pie Traynor in the latest victory dispels, for the present at least, any fears that may have existed about third base. There was times last year when Traynor fell below his usual high standards, and just how he would shape up this season was open to speculation. But on Saturday, as the hero of the triumph over the Cubs, Pie gave an exhibition that equaled the best of his palmy days, and the promise that he will be the Traynor of old this year means as much to the Bucs and their pennant chances as any other single item that could be mentioned.

LIKE EVERY RIVAL manager who has a good club in other departments, Max Carey figures that his pennant chances will depend entirely on the kind of pitching he gets. One hurler of the caliber of Lonnie Warneke, of the Cubs, would put the Dodgers over, according to Carey's line of reasoning.

As Max dopes it, the National League fight is going to be such an open one that any club coming up with a young pitcher capable of winning 20 or more games will be hard to beat out. He says if he can find a kid like that on his staff the rest will be just a breeze.

BECAUSE HE PUTS so much stress on this item of pitching strength, Carey thinks the dopesters at large are making a great mistake in failing to rate the A's as flag contenders in the American.

The Brooklyn manager declares that any club having Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg on its pitching staff is bound to be in anybody's pennant fight, and that if he had just two of those three on the Dodger flinging corps he would win the National League pennant before the Fourth of July.

ONE MORE MAJOR league figure of other days has come back to the big time in the signing of Tom Daly as coach of the Red Sox pitchers. Daly is an old catcher and has been around plenty, but strangely enough, though baseball is an American game, he had to go to Europe for the high spot of his career. He made a home run before the King of England in a game in London when the Giants and White Sox were on their round-the-world trip between the seasons of 1913 and 1914. To add to his activities outside the United States he played three seasons in Canada.

Phil Douglas

WHILE BILL TERRY and his new coach, Frank Snyder, were fanning about the old Giants of a decade ago and more, mention of the exiled Shufflin' Phil Douglas brought from Snyder the expressed opinion that that pitcher deserved to be ranked among the greatest pitchers ever known in baseball.

Pirates of that period remember Douglas with a headache. He caused them a lot of grief from time to time and played a prominent part in the five-game cleanup by the Giants that cost the Bucs the 1921 pennant after they had reached the middle of August with a lead of seven and a half box scores. The huge spitballer didn't linger long after that. Accused of offering, in a letter to Leslie Mann, to desert the Giants for a consideration so that the Cardinals could win the pennant, he was expelled from organized ball by Commissioner Landis on August 16, 1922, while New York was in Pittsburgh for a series.

"THERE WAS THE greatest pitcher I ever caught," said Snyder. "Doug had everything—curve ball, fast ball, change of pace, and in the bargain, that spitter. He wasn't the smartest fellow in the world off the field, but once he stepped into the box there wasn't anything to be done that he didn't know all about. The batter who smacked one off him never got another pitch of the same kind.

"And Phil was big and strong, and he liked to pitch. You could pitch him one day, finish up with him the next, and come right back and start him again a couple of days later. The more the years go by, the more I believe he belongs on any list of the greatest three or four pitchers that ever lived."

RAIN PREVENTS SUNDAY FRAY WITH CUBS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, April 17.—George Gibson's snappy Pirates today were in the throes of the first extended rest period they have experienced since the early days of their San Francisco sojourn.

Rain prevented the Cub-Pirate contest of yesterday and today is an open date on the schedule of the two teams.

Manager Gibson will run his pitchers and catchers through a workout some time after the luncheon hour. Gibby figures two days of enforced idleness might have a bad effect on his sharpshooters so he arranged for a drill.

SWETONIC READY

The two teams are slated to tangle tomorrow with Steve Swetonic and Pat Malone holding the pitching slips. Waite Hoyt also is a Pirate mound possibility, although Swetonic has the rail position for the final game here.

There was no chance to stage a contest at Wrigley Field yesterday, rain starting in the morning continued through the daylight hours. The Chicago officials called off the schedule contest about noon. It will be played here is part of a doubleheader on June 6.

Chicago fans today were still discussing the heroics that marked the Pirate victory of Saturday. Not all the high spots were on the Pittsburgh side, but the fact that the Buccos romped off with the victory at the end of 10 innings made the Freebooters a hot topic of conversation over the week-end.

PIE'S STOP THRILLER

The astounding stop contributed by Capt. Pie Traynor in the ninth inning will furnish fodder for Chicago fans for many days to come. Home supporters had started homeward in the ninth when the gallant Pittsburgh captain made a barehand play that saved the game.

Another Pittsburgh athlete in the limelight was Fred Lindstrom, who is a native of the midwestern metropolis. Fred kicked in with a triple and a double to please his neighbors of the South Side, who are not so loyal to Chicago that they pull for North Side successes.

Lindstrom's batting was a treat for his home supporters. His three-bagger in the tenth giving them special joy. It was this hit that led to the rally which won for the Pirates.

Lindstrom had a score of telephone calls from his friends who wished him and his new team good luck.

BUCS IN LEAD

The Pirates are in undisputed possession of first place with three victories and no defeats in their season's play to date. In winning three scheduled contests in a row, the Pirates have shaped up like a real team. Gibby's hustlers have copped eight battles in succession, counting five running triumphs in exhibition tilts.

The Buccos are eager to get back to Pittsburgh, nevertheless. The tour has been enjoyable, but there is no place like home. They are due to arrive in the home town Wednesday morning. Wednesday is open, the home opener to be staged Thursday with the Reds offering the opposition.

CHICAGO, April 17.—(AP.)—The Brooklyn Riding and Driving Polo Club will meet the 124th Field Artillery of Chicago here tomorrow night in the class D finals of the national indoor polo tournament.

CAREY KILLED IN AUTO RACE SMASHUP

LOS ANGELES, April 17.—(AP.)—Campaigning to recapture the national automobile racing championship he first won in 1932, Robert Carey, of Anderson, Ind., rode to his death at the Ascot Speedway yesterday.

He was killed in a practice run, his car ramming through a guard rail on a turn around the track in preparation for the 62½-mile feature event of the day's program.

The machine hurtled 30 feet into the air. Track officials said the foot throttle jammed. Several changes had been made in the motor recently by the driver.

Carey planned to participate May 30 in the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Babe Stapp won the race and set a new track record. He whizzed over the 62½-mile course in 45 minutes 37 seconds, bettering the old record by 4.80 seconds.

Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, was second; Rex Mays, of Los Angeles, third; Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, fourth; Lester Spangler, of San Pedro, Cal., fifth, and Chester Gardner, of Long Beach, Cal., sixth.

Carey was born in Anderson September 28, 1904, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Carey. His father was a bicycle repairman. The boy attended grade schools, but dropped out when he was a high school junior to become a garage mechanic, where he became interested in automobile racing.

PAULINO WINS

SEVILLE, Spain, April 17.—(AP.)—Paulino Uzcudun, Basque Woodchopper, gained a disputed decision over Hans Schonrath, of Germany, in a 10-round bout here last night. The verdict was protested by some of the 10,000 spectators who seemed to think the Teuton heavyweight's aggressiveness entitled him to a draw.

COLLEGE STARS KILLED, HURT

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 17.—(Universal Service.)—Addison Barnett of Santa Monica, Stanford freshman basketball captain, was instantly killed yesterday when his auto plunged off a road and overturned near the university campus.

GRIDDER INJURED

SALINA, Kan., April 17.—Clifford Davis, Kansas Wesleyan football player, was the center of medical discussion today as he lived 36 hours after his brain had been exposed and operated on.

The rim of an exploding tire crushed his skull Saturday, but he startled physicians by walking into the hospital and undergoing the operation, in which bone splinters were removed from his brain.

GOPHER STAR HURT

MINNEAPOLIS, April 17.—(AP.)—The University of Minnesota track team today was without the services of its captain, Charles Scheifley, injured in an automobile accident. His knees and ankles were injured when his machine collided with another.

SALING FUNERAL TODAY

CORYDON, Ia., April 17.—(AP.)—Hundreds of home-town friends today paid tribute to the memory of George Saling, Olympic champion in the high hurdles at the age of 24, and renowned athlete of the Middle West.

Saling died Saturday morning of injuries received in an automobile accident. Funeral services will be held today.

South and Duquesne Banquets Wednesday

Basketball champions of two schools will be honored at banquets Wednesday evening when the South Side and Duquesne pay tribute to their floors teams. The business men's associations are behind both affairs. South will hold its banquet in the German Lutheran Church, while the Duquesne banquet will be held in the steel works dining room.

Duquesne won the W. P. I. A. L. title and South the City crown. Duquesne was eliminated by South in the P. I. A. A. playoffs, the local passers advancing to the semi-finals before they lost to Altoona at State College.

Bill Finkell will be toastmaster at the South Side affair, while John R. Davies, of the Duquesne Trust Company, will serve in a similar capacity at Duquesne. Buddy Overend and Howard Harpster will be among the speakers at Duquesne, and Max Hannum, of Carnegie Tech, and Dr. H. C. Carlson, of Pitt, will be the South speakers.

STIX ELEVEN COPS

ST. LOUIS, April 17.—(AP.)—The Stix club yesterday won the opening game of a three-game series for the United States soccer championship of the United States, defeating the New York Americans 1 to 0.

Jack and Max Kept Busy Here Broadcasting

Jack Dempsey and Max Schmeling and the latter's manager, Joe Jacobs, had a busy time of it during their visit to Pittsburgh today for the opening of their exhibition tour in Motor Square Garden tonight.

At 12:15 p. m. they spoke over the combined hookups of WCAE and WJAS during the broadcast of Louis L. Kaufman, the Globe Trotter, from the editorial rooms of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Shortly afterward they were heard over WWSW and then held a reception downtown.

At 6:23 p. m., the pair will be interviewed by Tony Wakeman over KDKA and W8XK in the William Penn Hotel studio. The short wave station, W8XK, will transmit their voices over the world, and Schmeling will speak a greeting in German to his mother, sitting up in Berlin, Germany, to hear him. It will be 12:23 a. m. Tuesday in Berlin.

CLEVELAND WINS

CLEVELAND, April 17.—(AP.)—The Cleveland Riding Club rode rough-shod over a crippled Detroit trio last night 11 to 5½ to win the Class D sectional polo title and the right to represent the Ohio circuit in the national indoor polo championship meet in Chicago.

M'KNIGHTS TOP MOON RUN

The game was bitterly fought. The only goal came eight minutes from the finish, Steve Cutten shooting the deciding tally.

The contest served as a warmup for the McKnights, who will meet the Philadelphia German-Americans in the final round of the National Amateur cup at Philadelphia next Saturday afternoon.

In the benefit cup games yesterday, Shannon Zoneys defeated Heidelberg, 3-1; Local Union swamped Leesdale, 6-1; Sygan had an easy afternoon with the Shannon Webers, winning, 5-2, and Mt. Lebanon Firemen tied Coraopolis, 2-2. The Moon Run-McKnight lineup:

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Greta Garbo's feet may be flatter and more famous, but nobody's dogs have as much jinx appeal as Rogers Hornsby's. They say he's out of the lineup for a fortnight with a bum heel again and that's quite a blow to the Cards. Of course, there are plenty of heels in St. Louis, but none of them can play second base.

Nick Altrock

Hornsby has tried everything from chiropody to technocracy to keep his feet in shape, but all his bad luck seems to go straight down below his ankles. Personally, in my lifetime, I've totaled a couple of bushels of corns and a gross of bunions. But I just plop my dogs in mustard water and they come out o. k.

But you take Hornsby, as careful an athlete as you'd want to see, and if he happens to trip over a buttercup or something, bang! He's laid up for a couple of weeks with his feet. The only answer is there ain't no justice.

HUGE TURNOUT TO WITNESS EXHIBITION

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

"Ginsberg" is in town. The same Ginsberg who forgot to duck against Gene Tunney in Philadelphia on a September night in 1926 and lost the heavyweight championship of the world. When his former wife, Estelle Taylor, of movie fame, who gave him the pet name of "Ginsberg," asked him what had happened, he said:

"Honey, I forgot to duck."

Jack Dempsey—alias Ginsberg—arrived 15 minutes late at 9:35 this morning at the Pennsylvania Station, accompanied by Max Schmeling, the latter's manager, Joe Jacobs, and a retinue of sparring partners, a trainer and other folks, and, after fighting his way through a gathering of admirers, made his way to the William Penn Hotel, where headquarters were established for a day of bustling activity, including an exhibition at Motor Square Garden tonight and radio appearances.

TO BOX THREE ROUNDS

The exhibition will consist of three rounds of boxing by Schmeling with his sparring partners, the first mate going one round and the second two. This will go on before the main bout, to enable Schmeling to get dressed for the train which will pull out with the party at 11:56 for Boston, where the exhibition will be repeated tomorrow night. While Schmeling is getting dressed, Dempsey will remain in the ring to referee the main bout. Dempsey agreed to handle the main bout in addition to the exhibition upon his arrival this morning. The Garden offered to pay him extra for the job, but he refused to accept the renumeration, saying:

"I may want to come back here again some time."

Dempsey is promoting Schmeling's bout with Max Baer in New York on June 8, and the tour is a warmup arrangement.

The Ike and Mike of boxing—Dempsey and Schmeling look so much alike they could be palmed off as twins—found Pittsburgh taking them to its heart in a warm manner, and there was every indication of bulging walls at the Garden tonight.

DEMPSEY BUOYANT

Dempsey was his usual good-natured, beaming self. Schmeling, who arrived from Germany only last Friday to begin training, was no less congenial, but in a somewhat less buoyant manner. His command of the English language is rather limited, but when addressed in German he was quick to exchange greetings. Like Dempsey, Max is a former heavyweight champion, and he hopes to regain his lost title by beating Baer and then going on to conquer the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Primo Carnera battle, scheduled for June 29, in New York. He won the title by winning on a foul over Sharkey in the final elimination tournament after Tunney retired, and then lost an unpopular decision to Sharkey, who thus became champion.

Schmeling does not think he will have much trouble beating Baer. He saw the other Max box Johnny Risko a few years ago and was not impressed. Even allowing for improvement on the part of Baer, he still thinks the American is not in his class. He said:

"Baer, he likes the girls too much. He plays to the crowd. This fighting is a serious business. I will beat him."

MAXIE RATES RIVALS

As for Carnera, Schmeling says Sharkey will whip the huge Italian again and do it decisively. He says Sharkey is too clever and too versatile for the Primo. On the other hand, he believes Sharkey has gone over the hill sufficiently to make him ripe for their third meeting. With the experience of having fought the champion twice already, and with youth in his favor, Schmeling thinks he is a sure pop to take the American when they clash again.

The facial resemblance between Dempsey and Schmeling is striking, but their fighting styles are vastly different. Whereas Dempsey was a hell-bending fighter in action, depending upon his crushing left hook to knock out his opponents in jigtime, Schmeling is a conservative boxer with a

PITCHERS HOLD MAJOR LEAGUE SPOTLIGHT

LUCAS, BERLY TURN IN FINE TRIUMPHS

Associated Press

Although no satisfactory explanation has been found so far for the phenomenon, the major league pitchers this spring are well ahead of the batters. The showing of the merchandsmen in general has been little short of sensational.

Since the campaigns started last Wednesday, 24 games have been played and 11 times one team or another has been limited to five hits or fewer. What is more remarkable, flingers of nine different teams have figured in this stellar pitching; several others have just missed the five-hit mark. A lot of the clouting was due to individual work of a few players rather than to whole teams.

Yesterday two flingers hit the lowest mark made so far this season, two hits, and another pitched a five-hit game and lost it.

LUCAS, BERLY STAR

Charles (Red) Lucas, veteran righthander of the Cincinnati Reds, limited the St. Louis Cardinals to a pair of singles and let only one runner reach third as the Reds won their season's first game, 7 to 0. John Berly, of the Phillies, equaled the feat against the Boston Braves, who finally got their season started after four days' delay, and the Phils won, 2-0. Fritz Knothe was the only batter who could touch Berly's curve, getting a double and a single.

Walter (Huck) Betts, Boston's hurler, was the "hard luck guy." He gave the Phillies only five blows but two pairs of them were bunched at the proper moments to produce runs.

In Brooklyn, the first duel between the Dodgers and the Giants was halted by darkness after 14 innings with the score tied at 1-1. Joe Shaute and Carl Hubbell each pitched 11 innings and gave one run and eight hits apiece. The tally off Shaute, who retired after straining a leg muscle running out a hit, was unearned.

Wesley Ferrell, aided by Clint Brown, recorded the day's best pitching in the American League to give the Cleveland Indians a 7-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns. Ferrell gave only four blows before he injured his right shoulder striking out Jack Burns in the seventh and Brown allowed only two more.

LOU HITS THIRD

The Yankees, as usual, preferred home runs to strikeouts in chalking up their fourth straight triumph. Lou Gehrig walloped his third homer with Babe Ruth on base in the first inning and gave the World Champions the working margin with which they turned back the Philadelphia Athletics 5-4.

Rain and wet grounds eliminated three games from yesterday's program. The Pittsburgh-Chicago National League game was postponed as were the Boston-Washington and Chicago-Detroit contests in the American.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: BURNING ICE—Millions of cubic feet of "wet gas" flow from the Royalite No. 4 well through pipelines to the town of Turner Valley, Alberta, Canada, in a temperature of about 22 degrees below zero. The moisture in the outer air condensing upon the pipes settles in the shape of ice several inches thick. Some of it is so permeated with the gas that you may break off a piece of ice and watch it burn after a match is applied to it.

TOMORROW: A SOLOMONIC JUDGMENT.

SPORTS

By JAMES J. LONG

in Motor Square Garden tonight will make this city the scene of the first instance in which two former world heavyweight ring champions ever appeared touring together. Almost all of the old heavyweight kings made tours of one kind or another, either while holding the title or afterward, but they did it independently or with partners who never had been champions. This is the first hook-up of a pair of ex-title holders in the big division. It will be Schmeling's initial visit to Pittsburgh. Though Dempsey has made several brief stop-offs between trains here in recent years, tonight's engagement as referee of Schmeling's exhibition will mark Jack's first local appearance in a role connected with boxing since the time before his championship days when he sparred as a feature attraction at the old Victoria Theater.

MORE THAN SIX and a half years have elapsed since Dempsey lost the title to Gene Tunney. He says he has no thought of ever fighting again, and he is now only a promoter. Schmeling still is a prominent part of the heavyweight picture, is viewed by most fans as having been dethroned unfairly by a questionable decision, and stands a good chance of being the first man in history ever to regain the heavyweight title after having once lost it.

Yet of the touring pair, the one carrying the greater appeal to fight fans, and the one who will be the real drawing card at tonight's show, is Dempsey. He lost his title and is no longer a fighter, but, like the immortal John L. Sullivan, he did not lose his color or his hold on the public. To boxing followers he is still the old Manassa Mauler, his glory and popularity as one of the mightiest fighting machines in history unlessened by retirement or the flight of time.

A SURVEY CONDUCTED by Edwin B. Dooley among the leading football coaches, including Hunk Anderson, Pop Warner, Lou Little, Dan McGugin, Chick Meehan and others, reveals a strong spirit of optimism regarding the gridiron prospects for next season. They are a unit in the belief that though attendance and receipts will be affected by economic conditions, particularly at the smaller colleges, interest in the sport itself will be as avid as ever, even if many of the fans have to satisfy it by means of newspaper accounts of the big games.

Anderson is perhaps the most optimistic of the lot. The Notre Dame coach admits the probability that the smaller schools will continue to be hurt by the depression, and that even the larger ones will not draw unless they have able teams playing attractive games, but he thinks that in many instances football attendance will be better than last year, and that the big games will draw as well as ever.

Hunk Anderson

"THE DEPRESSION HAS not caused and will not cause a lack of interest in football on the part of the public," Anderson said. "People who can't afford to go to all games will pick out one or two big contests they particularly want to see. Those who can't afford any games will still read the newspapers with their accustomed avidity. Football has a terrific hold on the public because it is first of all a great game, a game founded on bodily contact, and one in which a great deal of physical courage is required. The game has been placed on a high plane because it is an amateur sport, played cleanly for the love of it by young men. It is spectacular and easily understood, at least so far as its more obvious features are concerned. The fans know they are getting an honest show when they go to a college football game."

Flanagan Claims Two Speed Marks

MIAMI, Fla., April 17.—(AP.)—Ralph Flanagan, freckle-faced 16-year-old school boy, today claimed two new world swimming records. With five persons clocking his free style strokes, he flashed past the 400-yard mark in 4 minutes 22 seconds, and then went over the 500-yard line in 5 minutes 31 seconds yesterday.

The record for 400-yard free style is 4:26, held by Arne Borg, of the Illinois Athletic Club of Chicago. The 500-yard free style record, also held by Borg, is 5:31.2.

CHAMPION JEBY VISITOR HERE

Two champions and two former fistic champions have set foot on Pittsburgh terra firma within the past 36 hours.

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, stopped at the William Penn Hotel Saturday night en route to St. Louis for a non-title bout Wednesday night with Martin Levandowski.

Today Jack Dempsey and Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champions, came into town for their exhibition at Motor Square Garden tonight and went to the same hostelry.

On another train from New York, Ben Jeby, the middleweight champion, and his manager, Hymie Caplan, bound for Cleveland for a bout with Gorilla Jones Wednesday night, had a stopover which enabled them to greet the Dempsey-Schmeling party.

Robbins Family Wins Net Titles

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, April 17.—(AP.)—The Robbins family, Mr. and Mrs., today recovered the South African men's and women's singles tennis titles they lost last year.

C. J. Robbins, South African Davis Cup nominee, defeated the veteran V. G. Kirby in a five-set final of men's singles, while Mrs. Robbins, the former Miss R. D. Tapscott, defeated Mrs. F. H. Lowe in a three-set final of women's play.

Caught in the "new deal" athletic movement on the Midway, which forced out the veteran Amos Alonzo Stagg after 41 years of service as athletic director and head football coach, Coach Page has decided to look for another job. He said:

Coach Page said he didn't know where he would go. He explained:

"I have several offers, but am anxious to land a four-sport job at a university or college where there is considerable athletic construction work to be done. I'm happiest when I'm working in football, baseball, basketball and track. I'm still young, you know, and have plenty of ambition."

Former Corsair Gets Only Hit Off Devens

Devans, pitching for Newark, was solved for a single by Barbee in the fourth inning. This was the only hit he yielded, but he issued seven passes, had a fielding error and lost a 2-1 decision to Toronto.

KERR RECALLS STARS HAVING LAST WORD

By JESS CARVER

"It's very, very bad when we coaches start leading with our chins. Do we get it? We do. Here, let me tell you what happened to me last fall."

The speaker was Andy Kerr, head football coach at Colgate, where his Red Raiders galloped through an eight-game schedule last fall unbeaten, untied and unscored on. Andy was in town last Saturday to attend the annual banquet of the local Colgate alumni chapter at the University Club. He returned to Hamilton today to resume spring practice with the 1933 Raider squad, from which he thinks he will be able to develop as strong an eleven as he had in '32. Continuing with his don't-lead-with-your-chin yarn, he said:

"Say, I have a 16-year-old kid in high school who can pass a ball better than that."

"A day or so later, one of the ends was working on a tackle in a manner reminding me of a finale-hopper balancing a tea cup.

"Say you, I have a 16-year-old high school boy who can take a tackle better than that."

"Well, a day or two later one of the boys was missing tackles all over the field. It was just before one of our tough games and I was burning up and gave the boy the very dickens.

"Hey you, I have a kid in high school who can beat you tackling 10 ways from the king."

"After practice that evening, in the dressing room, I was standing at my locker when I heard one of the boys, I think it was Bob Smith, remark in a very disgusted tone:

"'Boys, if this season goes two more weeks, Sandy will have that 16-year-old high school boy the greatest all-around football player in America.'"

The Tipoff

Coach Chick Davies, who piloted the Duquesne University basketball team to the city and district championship during the past season, has repaired to Swanson Country, Maryland, where he is spending his Easter vacation. Chick and his party are hidden away in a mountain lodge, where the Dukes' mentor is resting after the long and gruelling campaign.

Westminster has awarded nine varsity basketball letters, two going to Mauno Siljander, of Pittsburgh, and Jerry Newton, of New Wilmington, the only two lost for next year. Those honored follow:

Mauno Siljander, Pittsburgh, co-captain; Gerald Newton, New Wilmington, co-captain; John Wilhelm, Kittanning; William Douglass, Leith, Pa., captain-elect; Peter Leyshock, Farrell; Louis Patt, Altoona; Ray Sweeney, Youngstown, O.; Wesley Bennett, Akron, O., and Henry Hunneke, Baldwin, Long Island, N. Y.

There will be little, if any rest, for the Pitt and Tech track and field candidates this week. Both the Panthers and Tartans have dual meets slated for Saturday, the Panthers meeting Temple in Philadelphia and the Skibos taking on the P. A. A. in the Tartan Bowl.

Seventy men answered Coach Gilmour Dobie's call for spring football practice at Cornell, including only a dozen who had seen any sevice at all with the 1932 varsity. Only seven lettermen are available to supply the nucleus of the team which Gloomy Gil Dobie will send next fall through the most strenuous schedule Cornell has faced in many years.

SPRINGS TENNIS PLAY OPENS

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 17.—(AP.)—The thirteenth annual Mason and Dixon tennis tournament, opening here today, provided Davis Cup selection committeemen with another chance to weigh the merits of aspirants to the American team which soon will face Mexico.

In the singles field were such Davis Cup hopefuls as Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans; George Lott, Chicago; John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J.; Gregory Mangin, Newark, and Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, of New York.

Sutter, chiefly because of his straight-set victory over Lott in the final round of the North and South championship at Pinehurst, N. C., Saturday, ruled a favorite.

BIKE RACERS TIED

MONTREAL, April 17.—(AP.)—Three teams were tied for the lead at 8 a. m. today in the Montreal six-day bicycle race, with Elder and Horan, the nominal leaders with 17 points more than the other two first-place teams—Parrot-Rush and Reboldi-Saetta. The leaders had covered 152 miles, 6 laps.

BOBBY JONES' GOLF

By BOBBY JONES

Only Golfer Who Has Won U. S. and British Amateur and Open Championships in the Same Year.

W. Clegg, of Blackpool, England, writes of a discussion between himself and a friend, which he recounts as follows:

"He maintained that at the point of impact both feet were firmly planked on the ground as at address. I said, however, that the weight was on the left foot and that the right heel was just raised from the ground.

Bobby Jones

"I also pointed out to him that if he examined photographs of star players at the moment of impact (or even just before impact) he would find that the right heel was slightly raised from the ground."

Abe Mitchell, off hand, is the only expert player I know whose both feet at the instant of impact might be said to be "planked" upon the ground. In every other instance which I can recall the heel of the right foot is, by some distance, removed from the turf, and, in some cases, I have seen both heels off the ground exactly or approximately at the time the club met the ball. But this does not mean that the connection of the right foot with the ground is unimportant.

THE LEG MOVEMENT

Unquestionably, in the correct swing, the body, particularly the hips, must move forward with or ahead of the stroke, and at the finish of the swing practically all of the weight is supported by the left leg. But the business of the two feet is not merely to divide and support the weight of the body. The golfer's balance as he is swinging the club is a balance of motion and not that of a body at complete rest, and it is through the legs and feet that equilibrium is maintained.

In the correct swing, as the club is swung down and reaches a point in the downstroke when it becomes time to really hit out, the left leg straightens suddenly, exerting a powerful thrust up the left side, which gives the hips their final wrench, and, through the straight left arm, assists in speeding up the clubhead. If, as in the correct swing, the hips move forward and are turned well around past their position at address by the time the club reaches the ball, the right heel must leave the ground at some point during the downswing. If it remains firmly fixed the proper hip turn cannot be accomplished.

A SERIOUS FAULT

One of the most serious faults to which beginners are prone is that of holding the weight back on the right foot as they attempt to swing through. This results always in directing the swing across the line of flight from the outside and produces a slice if the face of the club is open at impact or a pull or smothered hook if it should have been closed.

It will be noted in the methods of the present-day experts that very soon after the downswing has been commenced the left heel returns to the ground, but, even so, this upward thrust which I have mentioned, produced by the straightening of the left leg, occasionally pulls even the left heel off the ground when the player is really hitting hard. This is one of the things which is responsible for my feeling that a golfer should cultivate the habit of being "light on his feet." Freedom of movement, both backward and forward, is absolutely necessary in order to complete a smooth rhythmic swing. Any attempt to set the feet firmly in the turf, either before or during the swing, is bound to hinder movement in one direction or the other.

Pin Stars Enter Iroquois Tourney

Virtually all of the star bowlers of the Pittsburgh district will vie with pinmen from Ohio and West Virginia in the Iroquois bowling sweepstakes tournament which will get under way at the Iroquois Alleys, Frankstown avenue, next Thursday night.

Harry (Sonny) Guest, winner of the all-events prize in the Tri-State tourney for the last three years, heads a fine array of talent entered in the competition.

Entries still are being received and those wishing to enter can do so by calling Emerson 9435, or writing N. Perry, Iroquois Bowling Academy, Frankstown avenue.

LOCAL TOSSERS AFTER PITLER

By TOM BIRKS

Another Pittsburgher who made his way to the big leagues probably will be seen in the City League this season. It became known today that a prominent City League club was dickering with Jake Pitler to play second base this summer.

Jake Pitler

Pitler is another one of the army of local boys who have refused to return to minor leagues and take big cuts in pay. Last season Jake managed the Hazleton club with success. Always a smart baseball man, there is every reason to feel that Jake still has plenty of baseball in his system, especially in a league like the City circuit, filled with minor league stars.

Jake started out as a member of Dick Guy's Collegians and, after a season in the Michigan State League, went to Chattanooga in the Southern Association. Pittsburgh purchased Pitler, and after one season with the Pirates in the National League, Jake was sold to Jersey City in the International League.

He refused to report and, after playing with local independent clubs for that campaign, went to Oil City to manage the Oilers. From Oil City he went to Elmira, and managed that club in the New York-Pennsylvania League for two seasons.

Hazleton was the next stopping place for Pitler, and the better part of two seasons found him guiding the destinies of the Fitzgerald club.

Jake comes from a famous family in sports. Dr. Dave Pitler, his brother, was a Pitt quarterback, and another brother, Harry, was better known as the boxer, Johnny Ray.

ALABAMA IN WINDUP

A card of four bouts supports the exhibition tonight. Carl Montebano, of Braddock, meets Alabama Kid, Dover (O.) Negro middleweight, in the eight-round windup following the exhibition, and, in three six-round preliminaries, Carmen Barth, Cleveland's Olympic Games middleweight, makes his local debut against Johnny Riske, of the South Hills, Tony DiPiero, local light-heavyweight, boxes Red Bruce, Hill District Negro, and Curly Klaas, North Side heavyweight, takes on Walter Ketchel. The show goes on at 8:30.

Tiger Joe Randall, local welterweight boxer, who broke Danny Devlin's jaw his last time out, has made himself a promise. It is that in the future he will go in for punching and make his boxing secondary. The Devlin bout convinced him that he can punch it out with the best of them and have a better than even chance of winning, whereas, when he boxes against taller and rangier foes, he is apt to dissipate his chances to a large extent. He meets Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, conqueror of Ted Yarosz, in the main bout at the Arena, on the North Side, next Friday night, and will be gunning for another knockout.

The card has been completed with the signing of Phil Rafferty to box Billy Holt in the 10-round semi-final, taking the place of a Charley Baxter-Louie Severo meeting. In the three six-round preliminaries, Eddie Zivic boxes Johnny Durso, Elmer Wilson meets Sharkey Lesko and Charley Scott tangles with Al Farone.

Berlin May Lose '36 Olympic Games

BALTIMORE, April 17.—(AP.)—In a letter to K. A. Miller, managing editor of the Baltimore Jewish Times, Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, today expressed the "personal, but unofficial opinion" that the Olympic games "will not be held in any country where there will be interference with the fundamental Olympic theory of equality of all races."

The 1936 games are scheduled to be held in Berlin.

STOCK MARKET PRICES TURN REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—The stock market began the new week with a moderate reaction today, in sympathy with principal commodity markets.

Trading was in light volume, and market analysists were encouraged by the list's tendency to turn dull on the decline. The list stiffened somewhat toward midday, and a number of issues partially recovered losses of a point or two.

Wall Street's attention was focused on agitation for currency inflation in Congress. Foreign exchanges, however, mostly subsided after their recent strength against the dollar, and commodity markets failed to reflect expectations of inflation. Only the gold mining issues responded bullishly to the inflation talk.

Much of the selling which came into the market in the early hours was evidently profit-taking, for it appeared in most of the recently strong issues. There was some tendency to await first quarter earnings statements, in view of the rather disappointing showing made by American Telephone, which was an unsettling factor in Saturday's market.

The statement of Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel, who told stockholders at their annual meeting, "we are buoyed up with hope and comfort that better times are ahead," attracted attention in the financial district, but Wall Street noted that Mr. Taylor avoided definite predictions. Acceptance of a resolution by the steel stockholders supporting President Roosevelt's economic program was another notable development at the stockholders' meeting.

WHEAT LOWER AT FINISH

CHICAGO, April 17.—Slackening of speculative demand led to lower prices for wheat and other cereals most of the time today.

Declines of wheat quotations were in the face of persistent adverse crop reports from the Southwest and sharply reduced estimates of prospective yields. Some crop specialists indicated a loss of 15,000,000 bushels in Kansas since the latest government report was compiled.

Loree's Central Cost $11,065,350

NEW YORK, April 17.—(INS.)—Leonor F. Loree, veteran president of the Delaware and Hudson, revealed today that his road's purchases of 10 per cent of the capitalization of the New York Central Railroad last year meant an outlay of $11,065,350.

The disclosure, made in the D. & H. annual report, bared for the first time the disputed point of the cost of the investment. This was $22.44 a share for 495,000 shares. New York Central is currently selling in the open market for about $17 a share, indicating a paper loss of more than $2,500,000.

The report showed a consolidated net loss of $5,424,899 for the D. & H. and its subsidiaries for last year.

Lake Superior Ore Consumption Gains

CLEVELAND, April 17.—Lake Superior iron ores consumed by furnaces during March totaled 1,255,904 tons., as against 634,443 tons consumed in February and 593,024 tons in March, 1932. Total ore on hand at furnaces and Lake Erie Docks April 1 amounted to 29,556,975 tons, compared with 34,491,280 tons on April 1, 1932. There were 35 furnaces in blast at the end of March, five less than a month previous.

Wyoming's 4-Cent 'Gas' Tax Upheld

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Wyoming won its suit in the United States Supreme Court in which the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., contested the legality of a tax of 4 cents a gallon on all gasolines used or sold for domestic consumption after storage in the state.

MENACE SEEN TO STOCKS IN PATERNALISM

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, April 17.—Few things could be more inconsistent than a rush to buy stocks at a time when "the government" is thought by some people to be planning to take over the business of the nation.

Stocks are equities in business or shares in business profits. But if far-flung paternalistic and socialistic schemes, now being considered, are put through, profits might all but disappear.

Remember that business is run for profits; government is not, so, whether you believe in socialism or not, don't overlook the fact that socialistic schemes are not good for stocks or the stock market. The essence of stocks today is private property and business profits.

THREAT TO INITIATIVE

Clearly there is a revolution threat to individual initiative, freedom of contract, and private property. And this is all the more serious because so many of the old "business leaders" have lost so much money and find their personal fortunes so impaired that they have become reckless.

Clearly, many former "business men" are willing to go out of business by unloading on "the government." They must figure that they can dispose of frozen assets by letting "the government" have them. They would get out of business, by letting "the government" (the rest of us) in. (Perhaps they figure that when "the government" fails as a business, they will be able to come back.)

Other "business" men seem merely to hope that "the government" will just help them out for a while, and let them continue to have their businesses. That is foolish and shortsighted. Where is "the government" to get its means of helping them? What resources has "the government" but taxes and public debts? Are these howlers for help figuring that they can avoid taxes? Are they figuring that others will buy government paper to give them funds?

MONEY MAKING PARADOX

"Business is money making." What, then, is a business worth if money becomes worthless? The government can "make money" (in a different sense) by speeding up the printing presses, but would that help business in making money (profits)? The more money the government "makes," the less the money that business makes will be worth.

Just suppose that the currency is so debased that we lost confidence in the value of a dollar. And that, as a result, prices are inflated. Either raw materials and wages would rise with other prices, or they would not rise. If they should rise, business might get the same dollar profits, but the dollars would have less buying power. But if wages and raw materials should rise proportionally what would laborers and farmers say?

Such broad "programs" as are now being considered, if taken seriously, are a threat to profits and hence to stocks. This is doubtless realized by the far-sighted who are probably selling to the foolish who rush in on the "inflation" rally.

HEAVY SELLING

As to the immediate position of the stock market, all the usual signs point to a topping off situation. The large volume and breadth of trading, while little gain occurs in the averages, shows heavy selling. The backwardness of the rails and the heaviness of utilities should be noted.

The market may hold up for a little while, but it was a good time to take profits Saturday, and if there should be another splurge today, I would be inclined to sell. If we are going to let the government run business, it is no time to buy business equities. We may need our dollars for paying taxes and buying government bonds.

Dismiss Old Suit Against Southern

..WASHINGTON, April 15. — (INS.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission has dismissed its proceedings against the Southern Railway for an alleged violation of the Clayton anti-trust law in acquiring stock control of the Mobile & Ohio.

The proceeding was instituted in 1929 and has been the subject of numerous hearings.

The road claimed that as it had acquired this stock control in 1901 before the Clayton Act was enacted, the commission had no jurisdiction in the matter.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Curb drifted lower in a dull session today. Last week's advances appeared to have attracted profit-taking and some offerings for short account, with the result that quotations of most leaders were revised downward.

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (do omitted in sales column or stock list; 000 omitted in sales column or bond list):

BAD WEATHER HELPS SUSTAIN WHEAT PRICE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Acts of man and of Providence gave speculators a vision of the prospects of higher prices last week.

Mr. Rukeyser

With the continued strength in cereals, speculative opinion focussed attention on the prospective decline in the winter wheat crop as a result of unfavorable weather conditions in the principal wheat growing states. The intervention of Providence as a price boosting factor facilitates the efforts of the administration to devise formulae for raising the prices and hence the exchange value of agricultural products.

FARM BILL UPHELD

Nevertheless, irrespective of temporary swings of the price pendulum, the administration is still eager for the Senate to pass the farm relief bill under which an experiment will be made in seeking economic balance through controlling production and artificially influencing prices. Incidentally, the delay in the Senate tends to weaken the government in the race against time to influence the new spring crops.

Moreover, speculative opinion was influenced by the new intimations from Washington that the administration was mindful of the need of counter deflationary moves, such as stimulating a program of public and semi-public works and perhaps through encouraging private activity either in accordance with the Rorty plan or the Kent plan or some other scheme.

DOLLAR CHEAPER

The present opinion is that counter deflation will be attempted through devices for building up employment and consumer purchasing power rather than through manipulation of the currency. Nevertheless, in connection with inflationary talk, there was further weakness of the dollar in foreign exchange markets, showing that the divorcement from gold was at length being reflected.

One group of financiers regards this depreciation as constructive, holding that it will set the stage for a reversal of commodity prices and thus impart the lift needed to break the existing economic deadlock. Advocates of this policy believe that the depreciation should be limited and rigorously controlled.

They suggest that the Treasury accumulate foreign exchange, which later can be converted into dollars when and if the dollar needs support. It has also been proposed that a definite gold fund be segregated to defend the dollar after the partial depreciation has been accomplished. Fantastic as this procedure may seem to the uninitiated, it follows the lines under which the British authorities have been operating their exchange equalization fund.

SOME BUSINESS GAIN

Meantime, in spite of the uncertainties as to the extent to which government will seek to direct the economic currents, business has been constructive in character. Coal and power production have been holding the line, and freight shipments have shown some improvement.

VACANT HOUSE ATTACK JAILS 4

Four men were held over in East End Police Court today in connection with the finding of Mrs. Gladys Austin, 26, Negro, in a vacant house, 6022 Station street, last night. She was suffering from bruises and a possible skull fracture and was removed to the Homeopathic Hospital.

Those held denied knowing how she received her injuries. They are John M. Carney, 6237 Station street; his cousin, John Carney, 6178 Broad street; Thomas Hoffman, 1365 Missouri street, and Fred Speas, 132 Carver street.

The Flapper's Daughter

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXIII.

All the next day Sharlie was sleepy and the shorthand symbols seemed to dance before her half-shut eyes as she set them down on the red-lined paper of her stenographers' note book.

What a stupid way to earn your living, she thought several times as the long hours dragged by. Setting down little shorthand symbols and tapping the keys of a typewriter day after day, year after year, in somebody's office. Getting a little raise in salary every now and then. Marrying perhaps—but more likely falling in love with your employer, as Edna had, and remaining his office slave forever and ever. Having no life outside the office.

The Gerow School of Business and the earnest eager-eyed girls in it never had looked so uninteresting to Sharlie as they did that morning—and her own future never had looked so dull and hopeless.

The flat seemed very dismal too that night when she got home, although it was in perfect order and last night's flowers were still fresh.

Dodie lay on the sofa in the living room, reading a magazine. She had on one of her nicest dresses—a blue and white silk—and she had groomed herself within an inch of her life. Her hair was in neat shining scallops around her face and her cheeks and lips were bright with color. So were her nails.

"I didn't know whether you'd be here for dinner or not," she said when Sharlie came in. "so I didn't get anything ready. There's some cold chicken in the icebox. You might make yourself a couple of chicken sandwiches. I don't want a thing myself."

SEEMS EXPECTANT

Sharlie went into the kitchen and made sandwiches and a pot of tea.

"You'd better have a cup of tea," she called to her mother when it was ready, and Dodie came into the dining room.

"I'll have a sandwich, too," she decided and ate part of one. She had the air of a person who is listening for some particular sound, wanting for some particular thing to happen. Once or twice she glanced at the telephone, and at the end of the little meal she got up and walked across the room to it.

"I wonder if that thing is out of order," she said thoughtfully. "It hasn't rung all day."

Sharlie was washing the few dishes at the kitchen sink when she heard the sound of a telephone bell. The water was running from both faucets and the door into the dining room was closed. She turned off the water and went to the door.

"Shall I answer the phone, Dodie?"

Her mother had not moved from her place on the sofa.

"That wasn't our telephone, Sharlie," she said without glancing up from the magazine, and as she spoke the ringing came again. It was the Barnums' telephone on the other side of the wall that divided the two apartments.

AN UNUSUAL CALL

"I hope," Dodie remarked, still without lifting her eyes from the printed page of the magazine, "that some time I'll live some place where the walls are thick enough to keep out the sound of other people's telephones and the smell of their cooking . . . I'm sick and tired of this cheap-John place. Sick and tired—" She sighed as if she were sick and tired of a good many other things.

Sharlie went back into the kitchen. The red glow of the sunset painted the wall above the sink and touched the nickel-plated soap dish and the clock with tiny points of rosy flame. The kitchen looked cheerful, but it wasn't cheerful any more than the rest of the flat was these days. Even the ticking of the clock on its little white shelf sounded lonesome and melancholy, and Sharlie missed the sound of her father's voice and Edna's . . . Edna and she had always gossiped and laughed over the dinner dishes.

"Sharlie!" Sharlie swung around at the sound of a voice from the door that led to the back porch. Jim Barnum was standing there, in his shirt sleeves. He looked as if he were angry and he spoke as if he were, too. "There's a man asking for you on our telephone."

"A man—asking for me?" Sharlie's face was blank with astonishment. She took the soapsuds from her hands and rinsed them off with clean cold water. "Why—I can't imagine who it is—"

Jim laughed. "I can," he said curtly.

Sharlie rolled down her sleeves and followed him across the back porch to the back door of the Barnums' apartment. No one but he was at home she saw as she went through the kitchen and dining room into the little hall that led to the bedroom. There wasn't a sound in the place but her own voice as she said "Hello" into the mouthpiece of the telephone.

PROMISES TO RECALL

"Hello, Sharlie." It was Caddy Dean's voice. "Surprised to hear from me, aren't you?" He sounded triumphant, as if he felt he had done something enormously clever in tracking her down like this.

"Why, yes, I am surprised," Sharlie answered. She turned her head and peered into the dining room. She could not see Jim, but she knew that he couldn't help hearing her unless he went out onto the landing, and he wasn't likely to do that.

"I just wanted to ask how's tricks with you," Caddy's voice went on, sounding much more ordinary and unattractive to Sharlie than it had the night before. "So I just looked up all the Barnums in the book—called 'em and asked for Sharlie. You didn't think you could lose me, did you?"

"No," said Sharlie, who had been hoping ever since the night before that she never would set eyes on him again. "No . . . I can't talk very well just now, Caddy. I'll call you—well, I'll call you tomorrow."

"Listen, baby, you'd better. Because I'll call you if you don't—"

"Why wouldn't I call you?" Sharlie asked him. She was ready to say almost anything to get rid of him. "Good night, Caddy. Goodby."

She spoke as softly as she could, and she hung up the receiver without making a sound. Her whole thought was to get out of the flat without having to talk to Jim again. He was terribly angry, of course . . . He must realize that she had told Caddy her name was Sharlie Barnum. Perhaps he even thought that she had given him the Barnums' telephone number.

STOPPED BY JIM

She turned around from the little black instrument and found him standing in the doorway between the hall and the dining room. It was too dark now for her to see his face.

"Thanks, Jim. Thanks for calling me," she said and took a few steps toward him. He did not move from the doorway but stood there, blocking her way.

"That bird asked for 'Sharlie Barnum'," he said. "What do you do—give our name when you go out and pick up men at dance halls and places like that?"

Sharlie did not speak for a minute. And in that minute she decided not to answer his question. She felt terribly guilty and terribly cheap, and some instinct told her that the best way to carry this thing off was to refuse to talk about it . . . And besides, it was none of Jim's business what she did. Of course, she ought not to have used his name, but that had only been an accident—a slip of the tongue. However, she was not going to explain that to him. Not when he treated her in this high-handed, overbearing way—

"I don't care for the way you're talking to me, Jim Barnum!" she said. "You may be the cock-of-the-walk here in your own home with your mother and sister, who think you're so wonderful—but—Oh, get out of my way! I'm going home!"

She tried to push past him, but he stopped her.

Synopsis

Pretty Sharlie Dunn marries Eddie Wallis, youthful ruffian, following a night spent in Eddie's car when it ran out of gas. The same day Eddie is killed by an automobile. Sharlie's mother, Dodie, and Maud Hanaberry her friend, have gay parties while their husbands are away. Sharlie is sent to her grandmother's. One night, returning unexpectedly, Sharlie observes Dodie and Maud entertaining two men. Later, Dodie informs Sharlie she is going to leave her husband. That afternoon, Mr. Dunn and Mr. Hanaberry return and take their wives and "friends" by surprise. Both husbands leave home. Longing for a good time, Sharlie calls Caddy Dean, whom she met at a dance hall. She goes to a roadhouse with his friends. Returning home they stop at the apartment of Marjorie Milliken, Caddy's friend. While there, Dodie's friend, Norman, calls. Sharlie lets Norman drive her home. She reveals her identity, hoping he will stay away from Dodie.

FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

APRIL 17, 1933. (For Section A.)

Approved for Pittsburgh City Schools, Allegheny County Schools and Parish Schools of Pittsburgh Diocese

After a Painting by F. Goodall.

THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW

Lucknow is the capital of Oudh, British India, outstanding in interest in connection with the Indian Mutiny (1857), when heroic energy of the British defended it against the insurgents; after a temporary abandonment it was recovered from the rebels by brilliant operations. Through this revolt the East India Co. lost the privileges and support granted in its charter by the British crown (charter was no longer renewed). Queen Victoria was proclaimed "Empress of India" (1877). (World's History.)

After a Drawing by Fred Barnard.

THE LIFE OF CHARLES DICKENS

ELECTRIC CURRENT

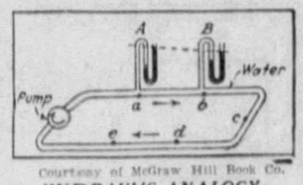
Electric current is flow of charged particles. (G) generator causes electric pressure, called electromotive force or potential difference, which moves them to the terminal of opposite polarity. A, B incandescent lamps. The potential difference is decreasing between intermediate points (a to e) and the — terminal. (Smith: Industrial Electricity.)



Courtesy of McGraw Hill Book Co.

HYDRAULIC ANALOGY FOR ELECTRICITY

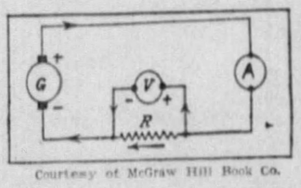
Uninterrupted piping filled with water. The pump maintains hydraulic pressure (similarly to the generator, causing electric pressure,) which moves the water as shown by arrows. A and B are manometers registering the pressure, which is decreasing from a toward e. (Smith: Industrial Electricity.)



Courtesy of McGraw Hill Book Co.

VOLT AND AMMETER

The voltmeter (V) measures the electromotive force in volts and is connected parallel to the circuit. The ammeter shows the intensity (rate of flow) of the current in amperes and is connected in series. R is a resistance. The whole current goes through the ammeter, but only part of it through the voltmeter (compare with gauge and flow-meter in issue of April 13.) (Smith: Industrial Electricity.) (Science.)

PORTLAND CEMENT (Chemistry)

It is made from limestone and clay or shale. These are crushed, mixed, pulverized and in a rotary kiln heated, just short of fusion, when it vitrifies and builds the grayish "clinker." The "clinker" ground to powder gives the final product. Portland cement "sets" with water forming a rock-like mass. Mixed with crushed stones, sand and water, it provides concrete, an important construction material. (Foster: Elements of Chemistry.)

HOW BIRDS BREATHE

Refrain From Celebrations

The greatest of all laws is that personal liberty stops where it encroaches upon that of another.

We all felt infringed and encroached when the reformers amended us into an artificial form of purity. We gave the drys credit for erratic sincerity, but squawked about being compulsory objects of their minority delusions.

Now, the shoe is on the other foot and the other foot is on the brass rail.

The wets are at the bat. And we abjure, beseech and implore them to remember that the drys still have their constitutional rights and privileges.

To be great in victory you must be humble. And we never saw anybody humble after the second or third beer.

Nevertheless, we ask the wets to restrict their crowings and gyrations in order not to offend the drys. We don't want to go through that thing all over again.

The drys said you couldn't have beer. It is no reason to grab them by the scruff and insist on them having a drink. Don't stag-ger into them on the sidewalk nor sing the rasping chorus of "Sweet Adeline" 'neath their bower windows.

If your reformer sniffed at you do not breathe on him in retaliation. Do not snatch him by the waist on the corner and insist on him doing a clog waltz in the midst of eastbound traffic. His reflexes and feelings are strung much finer than yours and he resents familiarity and the synthetic good fellowship that arrives with either moderate or indulgent tippling.

Although defeated he is a brooding volcano that may still hatch a flaming egg. He sneaked up on you the last time and still wears his political rubber heels.

This is advice you may discard or follow. It will be for the best if you contain your exuberance and limit your celebrations to sound-proof rooms.

And, most important of all, be a gentleman and never elbow a dry away from the onyx arm rest while he is admiring himself in the mirror at the back of the bar.

Low Tariff Fallacies

The American People Are in No Mood to Barter Away Protection for the Home Market

In seeking to dismiss with a mere condemnatory phrase the tendency toward economic nationalism, Secretary Hull oversimplified the complex questions centering around world trade.

Accordingly, the representatives of eleven friendly nations, which have been invited to send special envoys to Washington to discuss economic affairs with the President, may have been unduly encouraged.

Though the United States wants to be a good neighbor, the American people, with more than 12,000,000 of their own unemployed, are in no mood to barter away the safe guards which partially protect the home market in exchange for fanciful and highly questionable benefits.

The Secretary of State, for whom we have abiding respect as a sincere statesman, mistakenly identifies tariff reduction with modernism.

On the contrary, what he proposes is a throw-back to the rejected theories which Adam Smith, the British economist, expounded at the time of the American Revolution.

Seemingly innocuous tariff reduction doctrines, couched in terms of brotherly love, may enormously weaken America in its resistance to the international drives which have been made against its economic primacy.

When the President confers with foreign visitors, he should ever be mindful of the fact that within the confines of our home borders nearly one-half of the world's total trade normally takes place.

Furthermore, he should set alongside of this fact in his own thinking the related data that in the boom years, 1927-29, America's exports constituted only 6 per cent of the realized net national income, whereas in other countries the ratio of exports to the national income ran as high as 60 per cent, as in the case of Belgium. If the export trade of the United States is related to gross income, it amounts to only about 3 per cent of the total.

---

Moreover, even such trade as was obtained was bought by giving the foreigners the purchasing power with which to repay us—partly by means of foreign loans, some of which are uncollectible, partly by foreign equity investments, and partly by invisible imports, including huge tourist expenditures and immigrant remittances.

The "new deal" domestic policies, admirable in conception, are based on an attempt to substitute managed reason for blind chaos in the business world.

Such measures as the farm bill, unemployment relief, and the shorter work week are conceived in terms of the domestic economy.

Every possible effort should be made to expand trade—foreign and domestic—but no thoughtless sacrifice of the restrictions, at present inadequate, which safeguard American superior living standards should be made.

Seductive tariff theories, formulated in foreign lands whose interests are different from our own, should be rigorously tested in accordance with the bookkeeping facts concerning the American economy.

President Roosevelt should be encouraged in his determination to make concessions only on a reciprocal basis.

When the debits and credits are set up against one another, the danger to American labor and to American business prosperity of a reckless abandonment of protective tariffs will become clearly visible.

The best service which America can render to the distraught world is to make itself economically strong again.

On the other hand, if misguided by visionary allusions to the virtues of free trade, we shall tend to go down with the rest.

Until all countries develop a uniform living standard, free trade tends to pull the stronger down to the economic level of the weaker.

The Billboard Nuisance

Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, agrees with Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence, chairman for Pennsylvania of the billboard and roadside committee of the Garden Club of America, that large signs along the highways tend to distract drivers' attention from the road and thus are a danger.

The Better Traffic Committee had erected a sign bearing a safety message, but will find some other way of admonishing autoists to be careful.

The Civic Club has long been active against offensive billboards, and the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women has indorsed the movement. These efforts are bearing fruit. Senator Frank J. Harris has introduced a bill in the Legislature requiring outdoor advertisers to procure licenses and permits from the State Department of Highways before billboards may be erected.

The bill is just and reasonable. It does not interfere with the advertising of one's business on one's own premises, but prohibits the erection of billboards which in the judgment of the Department of Highways would be injurious to property in the vicinity or adversely affect public safety or the public interest.

The measure would serve to protect beautiful scenery along the highways from defacement. It would prevent the erection of huge signboards at points where they would cut off a superb view of mountains and valleys.

Refer It to the Voters

The People Should Be Allowed to Pass on the Old Age Pension Constitutional Amendment.

Senator Clarence J. Buckman, chairman of the subcommittee to which the old age pension constitutional amendment bills were referred, announces that a hearing on the measures will be held tomorrow afternoon.

It is to be hoped the hearing will be largely attended and that strong representations will be made in favor of the passage of the bills and the submission of the question to the people in the election next November.

The foremost social workers declare it is better for the state to grant small pensions to destitute old folk and let them continue to live in their own homes than to send them to the poorhouse.

Powerful interests are trying to smother the legislation. Let the people decide.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Questioning

Winding river, creeping river,
Now so near the sea,
Once you raced and leapt so fiercely,
Eager to be free.
Fretting at the banks that held you,
Foaming, tossing, wild;
Tell me now, O, mighty river,
Why have you grown mild?

I am like a little river,
Restless at restraint,
Turbulent as mountain waters,
Uttering complaint.
Mighty river, moving slowly,
Will my rashness cease;
Shall I find some day, O, river,
Depths, like yours, of peace?
Shall I, nearing ocean, lose this
Ardour to be free?
Will the calm you know, broad river,
Come at last to me?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 17.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Lay late pondering the turn of the century which evoked memories of such figures as Zim, the cartoonist, May Yohe, Mary MacLane and Lafcadio Hearn. And, in especial, of the daffydills painted on the Yama Yama costume of Bessie McCoy.

To my desk, plagued by ideas that zoomed like bumble-bees but would not light. And Ed Nolan, from California, came by for a long contentful talk. Then with my wife to Music Hall and sat with Dot and Deac Aylesworth to see a picture. So walking on the avenue and home.

Driving at sundown to Gene and Helen Buck's at Great Neck to frolic with their two fine boys. And Bruce and Esther Barton came to dinner, too, and afterward Dick Hyland, Adela Rogers St. John and the Leon Gordons dropped in and high talk until long after midnight.

Gene Buck's enormous colonial mansion at Great Neck should be inspiring to boys out yonder with eyes on the big town. He came here 20 years ago to paint covers for popular songs of the day, suddenly went blind for an entire year as the result of strain from overwork. His present home is the former home of Warner, the sugar magnate, and has the largest drawing room on Long Island. So large indeed Ring Lardner, one time neighbor, dubbed it "Yale Bowl No. 2."

* * *

Buck's study is lined with photographs of celebrities—Victor Herbert, A. L. Erlanger, Will Rogers and others—with whom he has come in contact during years in the theatrical whirl. There are a number, affectionately autographed, by Florenz Ziegfeld, his associate for so long. Until Ziegfeld married Billie Burke, he and Buck shared the same apartment.

* * *

An interesting story was told of Ziegfeld's last days. Three expensive productions had buckled in a row, piling up an enormous deficit. The Follies producer was in a frenzy of anxiety and turned to astrology for a chink of light. A dinner party to include the late Evangeline Adams was arranged. Over the coffee, Ziegfeld suggested a reading. The astrologist learned the date and hour of his birth, made a few comments and veered to other topics. Suddenly she glanced at a watch and announced she must go. In an entry she put her hand on Buck's arm, nodded toward the room where Ziegfeld sat, and murmured: "I'm sorry." He died four months later.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I went into my garden this morning.

It is a small garden, but alive with a tremendous busy-ness now that spring is here.

Bright spears of grass are pushing up between the flagstones. The earth has heaved over the thick crust of tulip buds. A frond of fern is lifting 20 times its weight in fallen leaves as it uncurls. A ridge of earth is rising like a mimic barricade above the place where I planted my sweet peas.

There is a flash and a fury everywhere in the moist brightness. Sitting very still, one can almost hear the turmoil of growing—the pushing and shoving—the fierce tussle of these small green things with the clods and gravel which lie in their way. Even the green shimmer is like the fragrant smoke of a mighty battle.

I do not think that I ever felt the savagery of spring so keenly before. We're so accustomed to think of spring as a sweet, tender season. But, though it is veiled in beauty and bound for a glorious harvest, this onrush of the life isn't sweet and tender. It must be painfully difficult for those delicate seedlings to push their way through the soil. How much it costs to achieve the loveliness which will come next month! How busy they all are—how tense and determined—what a serious, hard job life is for even a blade of grass!

But I don't suppose the grass resents it—any more than that fat robin resents the constant toil and combat by which it gets its food. Any more than the earth resents the long travail of its evolution—the earthquakes and upheavals and eruptions, the storms and the droughts and floods which have shaped it from its first vague chaos.

Isn't It So?

The chief function of the human skin is to help out the druggist.

I wish I could take my life as simply.

I have already resented pain and difficulty. We all do that. We're supposed to do that. In some way we humans have formed a tradition that life shouldn't be hard—that if it is hard—it isn't a success. We think of suffering and strain, struggle and death as hardships and imposition—things that mar and scar the normal course of human life.

Yet, there, in my growing garden, were struggle and strain on every hand. And preceding this there was that dark oblivion we call death, but which, to the seed, is as natural and necessary as any part of life.

Such things are not impositions to the seed—they are natural. They are the soil in which that life is rooted. Without that burial in the soil, without that solid rooting in the soil—without the hardship of overcoming the soil, there can be no harvest.

What of my harvest? And the urge of life that runs through me as it runs through the grass? Is pain and hardship the soil in which I, too, must fight my way and root my growth?

Two Faces, Two Hats

One Nearly Right, the Other All Wrong

THIS HAT IS NEARLY RIGHT

THIS HAT IS ALL WRONG

The picture on the left is nearly right, as regards hat and hair, for these reasons:

You see the left side of the forehead uncovered, hair drawn back. You see at least PART of the ear. It would be much better if the whole ear were visible. The ear shows character; its location low down on the head, as in this case, shows plenty of room for brain above. Location high up indicates a smaller brain container—no brain BELOW the ear.

The picture on the right is all wrong for these reasons:

The veil, heavily embroidered, covers up the mouth. That may be "mysterious, alluring, fascinating, bewitching," heaven knows what. But it is NOT the sort of thing that an intelligent young woman should wear.

She should be HERSELF, without frills or fringes, sufficiently attractive.

The picture is wrong also because the hat comes down and covers the forehead and part of one eye.

Don't paint the natural skin that Nature gave you, or at least paint it as little as possible.

'NO-COUNT' HUSBAND

By Winifred Black

The wash woman came upstairs from the laundry.

"Look out of the window," she said, "the clothes are on the line in the wind and the sun is shining and my, but they look pretty, all them pinks and blues, and won't they be fresh and sweet when I get them ironed, all smooth and nice?"

"Sit down, Hattie," said I to the wash woman, "sit down and talk to me while your clothes are drying on the line."

And Hattie sat down in a good big chair—it takes a good big chair to hold Hattie. She's good and big herself. As big as her heart. And that's saying a lot.

Hattie is something between 50 and 60, I'd think. I've asked her age three or four times and she always tells me a different story.

Hattie has been too busy to keep track of her age. What's a little thing like that anyhow? She's young enough and strong enough and willing enough to do a good day's work and that's all that matters—to Hattie. Hattie has a husband and two daughters and two sons and seven or eight grandchildren.

Her husband doesn't seem to amount to much. Hattie says herself that he's "kinda no-count." But she likes him. He used to be a barber and he cuts the grandchildren's hair just grand, so Hattie says.

And days when she's out doing a washing husband has a good hot dinner of pork chops and cabbage and coffee all ready for her the minute she lays off her hat.

Hattie ought to know. She's had quite a few husbands—I never can remember just how many.

One of Hattie's daughters is a good housekeeper and the other is "jest natchelly tacky," so Hattie says, but you can see without half trying that Hattie likes the tacky daughter best.

The grandchildren are wonderful. One of them plays the steel guitar, mind you. And one sings at the Sunday school entertainments and the rest can all speak pieces.

Hattie is a little worried about the daughter that's the good housekeeper. Daughter's husband is a railroad man and daughter sometimes "steps out" when her husband is away. But the thing Hattie worries about is this:

"That Cleopatra, she talks so much," says Hattie. "I keep tellin' her, 'Patry, don't you never tie no knots with your tongue that your teeth can't untie.'

"But say, she don't listen—you catch the wind—and tie him to a traffic signal and you'll stop Patry from talkin'."

Hattie tells me about the Daughters of the Wilderness lodge and the supper they are going to have for the new preacher. And she tells me about the green and yellow parrot her sailor son has brought home from Panama. And she tells me how she makes beaten biscuits in the old time way. Some day, she says, she will make some for me.

I'm always sorry when the clothes wave to us from the line to tell Hattie that they are ready to be ironed.

Somehow, with Hattie in the house, I feel as if someone had lighted a cheerful fire on the hearth in a quiet room that is sometimes a little lonely.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

But the one whose heart is filled with kindly feeling would find it impossible to assume the attitude of a haughty snob or an overbearing boor.
